WASHINGTON (UPI)—Presidential nominee George S. McGovern, who is moving to mollify the moderates in the Democratic party, is encountering some early political flak from the left as well.

The Democratic candidate's stands on Vietnam and tax-reform surprisingly have been hit by the Democratic left in the days since he wrapped up the nomination.

Antiwar demonstrators heckled the South Dakota Senator after he told the families of prisoners of war he would retain a military capability in Southeast Asia once American troops are withdrawn from Vietnam.

And some delegates to the convention who supported McGovern were deeply disappointed that he failed to support minority planks calling for $6,500 guaranteed wage and a program to end immediately all income tax exemptions.

McGovern rested at his suburban home Sunday before a two-week trip to the Black Hills of South Dakota to rest up from his 16-month struggle for the nomination. He is expected to spend the first week swimming, hiking and relaxing and the second week in preliminary staff conferences to lay the groundwork for the campaign against President Nixon.

One of the first items on the agenda will be McGovern's controversial plan for fundamental change in the income tax structure to guarantee for the first time that every man, woman and child in the United States has a guaranteed income to meet his expenses for food, shelter and basic needs each year.

McGovern originally proposed an annual payment of $1,000 for every person, from the poorest to the richest, but is now expected to alter that plan to accomplish the same thing through income tax deductions.

The plan envisions ending the welfare system and replacing it with a fixed level of government guaranteed income for persons unable to support themselves.

McGovern claims the program can be financed by ending tax loopholes for business and industry and raising taxes on the wealthy. He claims persons under $20,000 income would not have to pay a cent of extra taxes to support the proposal.

McGovern has rejected a $6,500 minimum government guaranteed income proposed by welfare rights groups. He contended the nation is not ready to accept such a large stipend. He has not yet fixed the amount he will propose, but aides expected it to be in the neighborhood of $4,000 for a family of four.

Consequently, welfare rights groups and those seeking a commitment from McGovern for an end to all income tax exemptions, left Miami Beach disgruntled over his role in defeating their planks.

In addition, militant groups opposing the Vietnam war were notified that McGovern altered his unconditional promise to withdraw U. S. forces from Vietnam within 90 days after his inauguration and end the bombing of North Vietnam on inauguration day.

Meany faces crucial test over political neutrality

By BYRON E. CALAME
Dow Jones-Ottaway News

WASHINGTON — AFL-CIO President George Meany, who months ago girded for an election-time push by labor to defeat President Nixon and his economic controls, now suddenly faces a crucial test of his own leadership.

And the test, ironically, has grown out of a dispute over whether to endorse the one alternative to Nixon — Democratic Presidential nominee Senator George McGovern.

A small group of key union leaders who favor a McGovern endorsement vows to challenge Meany's efforts to keep the 13.5-million-member AFL-CIO officially neutral in the presidential campaign. If the federation refuses to endorse McGovern, some members of the group are threatening to cut off their contributions to the committee on political education, or COPE. This is the AFL-CIO's political arm and has been the real source of Meany's power in American politics over the years.

"There has been nothing like this in a long time," one labor veteran says. "The potential is there for lasting schisms . . . that have ramifications beyond politics," another unionist asserts. Asked whether the clash that is developing amounts to a crisis, a top official of one of the federation's largest affiliates replies tersely: "You had better believe it."

The showdown will begin Wednesday at a special meeting of the federation's policy-making executive council. The session was hastily called by the AFL-CIO president only hours after the Democratic convention ended in Miami Beach early Friday morning. While Meany has been publicly silent, aides have indicated that he will urge the 35-member council to shun the federation's traditional endorsement of the Democratic nominee.

Meany's aides insist that a majority of the council, which he has long dominated, will side with him on his move to keep the AFL-CIO neutral. Such neutrality would be accomplished by failing to call the tentatively scheduled Aug. 30 meeting of the federation's general board. The board, composed of the presidents of all 117 affiliates, normally makes presidential endorsements. Under the Meany strategy, individual unions could endorse anyone they chose, and COPE would focus its resources on critical congressional races.

The union officials preparing to challenge the wisdom of this strategy concede that they face an uphill battle, particularly if Meany makes the issue "a test of personal loyalty" to him. Even though McGovern wasn't the first choice of all the challengers, they contend that the AFL-CIO must endorse the Democratic nominee and work for him if there is to be any chance of defeating Nixon in November.

Moreover, these union leaders are focusing much of their criticism over Meany's talking of neutrality, they charge, he has taken unilateral actions in recent days that have put the federation in the position of criticizing McGovern.

One complaint concerns a 48-page attack on the senator's voting record distributed to delegates and newsmen in Miami Beach last week.

Democratic vice presidential nominee Thomas F. Eagleton, meanwhile, hopes to meet this week with Meany in an effort to heal the breach between him and the party ticket. He expressed confidence he could convince Meany that a McGovern-Eagleton ticket would be far more preferable to organized labor than the Republican slate with President Nixon and either Spiro T. Agnew or John B. Connally Jr. as his running mate.

Fischer heads for first win in world title chess match

REKJAVIK, Iceland (UPI) — The third game of the world chess championship match was adjourned after 40 moves Sunday and experts said U.S. challenger Bobby Fischer appeared to be headed for his first win against world champion Boris Spassky of the Soviet Union.

Spassky was in trouble as he pondered his 41st move. After he made it, he got up and left the table. Fischer remained in his black leather swivel chair for 10 minutes pondering his response and then filed it in an envelope to be opened when play resumes at 5 p.m. (1 p.m. EDT) today.

Fischer ended the five-hour playing session Sunday on the attack. He forced two queen checks in the 38th and 39th moves.

"Bobby has a chance to win this game," said Robert Byrne, a U.S. grand master. "He is a pawn ahead. The only problem is that they have bishops of different (board) colors which is a complication."

Even Nikolai Krogius, one of the world champion's seconds, admitted the temperamental American chess grand master had a good chance for his first win in the $250,000 match. Fischer lost the first game by a decision on the 56th move and the second game by forfeit when he failed to show up. Spassky, 35, leads in the 24-game match 2-0.

Sunday's game was begun in a closed room with only the arbiters present. The room, a table tennis playing area, is 75 feet by 30 feet with red painted walls and yellow curtains to shut out the late night sun.

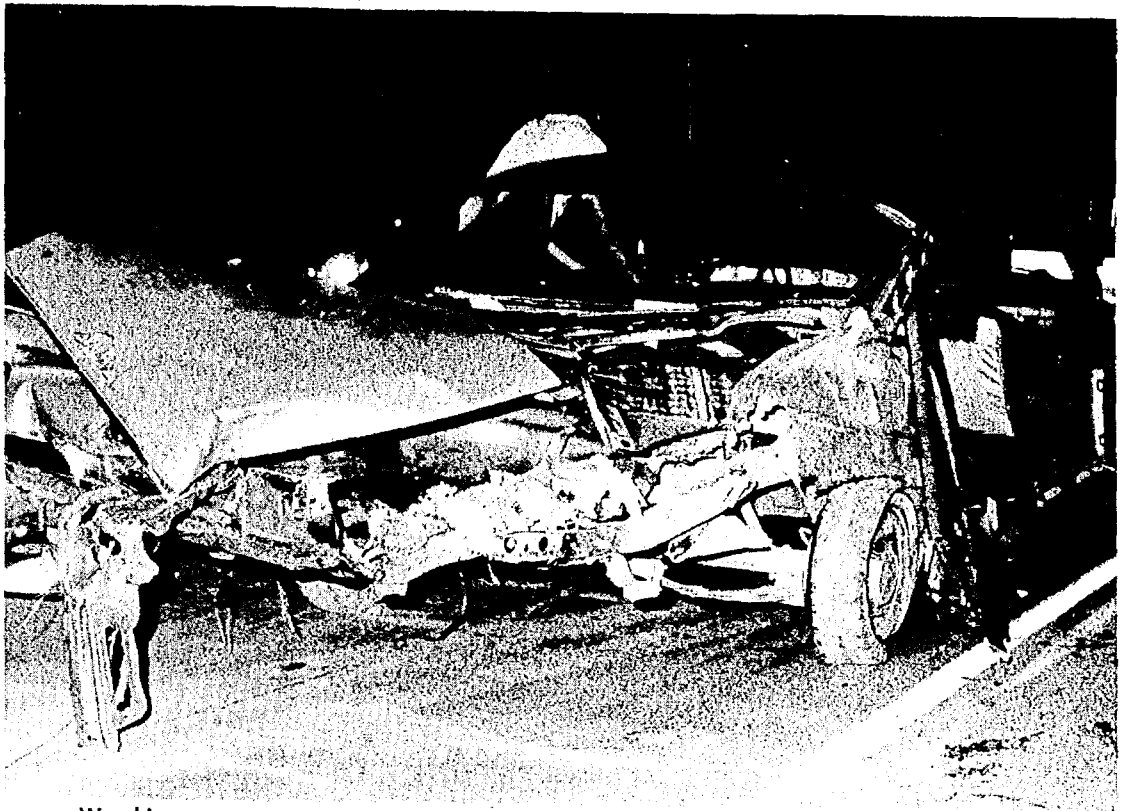

For a time organizers feared Fischer, 29, would again fail to show up protesting the presence of closed-circuit television cameras in the Icelandic Chess Hall. The temperamental challenger even went so far as to book passage home to New York on a Sunday night flight.

However, 90 minutes before the game was to begin the unpredictable chess genius suddenly changed his mind and agreed to play in the closed room.

When the game was adjourned after Spassky, playing white, took his 41st move and Fischer had handed his next move to arbiter Lothar Schmid of West Germany, Fischer hurried from the closed room with his second, the Rev. William Lombardy, the American's only analyst.

Teenage girl, S-burg man killed in traffic accidents

STROUDSBURG — A 24-year-old Stroudsburg man and an 18-year-old Newfoundland girl were killed early Sunday morning in two separate accidents, both the victims of one-car crashes.

Their deaths bring the 1972 Monroe County traffic fatality total to 19, an unprecedented rate in the county's history. The most highway deaths recorded for any one year in this area is 21, a figure tallied in 1961. With almost a half year remaining, a new record high is virtually certain.

The first accident Sunday occurred on Main St., Tobyhanna, when a car driven by Beverly Jane Hartman failed to negotiate a curve and struck a tree. Coolbaugh Township Police officer Joseph Gerrity estimated the auto was traveling at approximately 45 miles per hour at the time.

The second tragic accident took place on Route 209 in Stroud Township just outside the Stroudsburg borough limits near the Banner Metal plant. Gary L. Custred, of Nase's Trailer Court, Stroudsburg, was pronounced dead at the scene after his car went out of control and struck several utility poles and signs before coming to a halt.

Miss Hartman was pronounced dead on arrival at the General Hospital of Monroe. Cause of death was determined as a broken neck. A passenger in her car, Lee W. Hoffner, of Saylorburg R.D. 1, was slightly injured but refused medical treatment at the scene according to police.

Gerrity believes Miss Hartman took her eyes from the road momentarily and ran off the road. The auto was 11 feet from the shoulder of the road and there were no skid marks.

Stroud Township Patrolman Wilbur Hay said Custred was traveling north on Rte. 209 when his car went out of control at the crest of a hill. The auto traveled some 400 feet along the side of the highway, striking two utility poles roadside and running over three street signs and highway markers before stopping.

The passenger side of the car was torn open and the trunk of the vehicle was all but sheared off. Custred was found 65 feet from his car but Hay has been unable to determine how the man was thrown from the auto because of the extent of damage.

The time on the dead man's shattered wristwatch indicated it had stopped at 3:55 a.m. Stroud Township received word of the accident at 3:57 a.m. after the wreck was found by an unidentified passing motorist. Custred was alone in the car.

Miss Hartman was a 1971 graduate of Wallenpaupack Area High School and was senior class vice-president. She was employed at the Tobyhanna Army Depot in the Post Exchange.

Custred worked with Beaufab Mills, Stroudsburg, and was seen leaving Beyer's Diner in Snydersville prior to the accident. Both accidents are still under investigation and an autopsy will be performed to determine the exact cause of Custred's death.

Power blackouts predicted in nation by FPC chairman

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Power blackouts and brownouts will be experienced this summer in the East Coast, Midwest and Southern states, John N. Nassikas, chairman of the Federal Power Commission, said Sunday.

In a copyrighted interview in U. S. News and World Report, Nassikas said power shortages would be felt in "Florida, Virginia, the Carolinas, New York City and the Illinois-Iowa area of the Midwest." He said equipment problems with coal-fired plants in the Southwest could cause trouble there.

"One of the regions where generating capacity is critically short is the Southeast, particularly southern Florida and the Virginia-Carolinas area," Nassikas said. "As a result of hurricane Agnes, the major utility serving Virginia suffered damage to two generating plants and its computerized system-control center. Overall reserve margin in the Southeast is the lowest of any region, currently a little less than 10 per cent."

Reserve generating capacity of at least 20 per cent is considered necessary for protection in emergencies.

Nassikas saw possible trouble ahead for New York City.

"Reserve generating capacity is thin," he said. "We had hoped that New England could export power to beleaguered New York City if needed, but two nuclear plants that were expected to be in operation this summer will not be ready. One is the Vermont Yankee facility just south of Brattleboro on the Connecticut River. The other is the Pilgrim plant at Plymouth, in Massachusetts."

Power requirements in Florida already are slightly higher than the forecast peaks for the 1972 summer season, and public appeals have been made for voluntary curtailment of unessential loads, Nassikas said.

GOP concerned protestors would disrupt convention

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Nixon's top campaign organizers expressed concern Sunday that militant demonstrators will disrupt the Republican National Convention in August and "make it difficult to have our convention in peace."

Sen. Robert J. Dole of Kansas, GOP national chairman, appealed to the Democratic presidential nominee, Sen. George S. McGovern, "to get in touch with his antiwar supporters and let us have our convention in peace."

Clark McGregor, chairman of the Committee to Reelect the President, said "I think the demonstrations are a problem for concern. I've read underground newspapers and others which indicate there is a plan to paralyze the Republican convention just as there was a plan to paralyze the federal government last year."

Dole made his remarks on NBC's Meet the Press and McGregor appeared on ABC's Issues and Answers.

The pair commented on remarks made by militant Rennie Davis who said "it was decided months ago that the greatest mobilization would be concentrated on the Republican convention. We expect the demonstrations to be large, disciplined and militant."

Protests planned for August in Miami Beach include lining the streets with people holding posters depicting Vietnam war scenes.

Asked if he would characterize the planned demonstrations as representative of the fringe elements of youth, McGregor replied "yes, I would. They do not represent the thoughtful concerns of the youth of America."

The GOP national committee's weekly publication, today, said that McGovern's main problem between now and November "may well be not what the Republicans are going to say about him, but rather what his fellow Democrats have already said."

Bear attacks scouts

CIMARRON — A medium-sized brown bear tore through a campsite at the Philmont Scout Ranch in Northeastern New Mexico early Sunday and attacked four scouts who were asleep in their tents. Two of the four scouts attacked were admitted to the Philmont Medical Lodge for treatment of puncture wounds. The other two were treated for minor scratches and released to return to the trail where they were on a 12-day hiking and camping trek in the rugged wilderness area near Cimarron.

New trial sought for Calley

SALT LAKE CITY — The chief defense attorney for Lt. William Calley said Sunday he will ask for a new trial as the result of the discovery of a new witness to the My Lai massacre. Petition for the new trial will be based on testimony from Charles Dean Graver of Stotesbury, Mo., who was an Army private under Calley's command during the infantry sweep of My Lai. (Details on page 2).

U.S. spying described

NEW YORK — U.S. intelligence techniques were described as so sophisticated that Washington keeps track of every Soviet plane, missile-carrying submarine and troop unit as well as routinely listening to and decoding Soviet communications. The description, in Ramparts magazine, was by a person purported to be former Air Force sergeant who had been assigned to the National Security Agency. The Pentagon, NSA and the western White House all declined comment. (Details on page 5).

Governor stops riot

BALTIMORE — Maryland's governor conferred with 18 inmates at the Maryland House of Correction after a night-long riot that brought 150 state police to the prison, midway between Baltimore and Washington. Gov. Marvin Mandel said he was a "peace-loving man" and agreed to discuss inmate grievances with 18 representatives if the rest of the men return to their cells. A demand for amnesty by the inmates, mostly young blacks, was denied. (Details on page 16).

My Lai massacre witness found

New trial sought for Lt. Calley

Lt. William Calley

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI)—Lt. William Calley's chief defense attorney said Sunday he would ask for a new trial as a result of the discovery of a new witness to the My Lai massacre.

"We will seek a new trial soon," said George W. Latimer, ranking legal counsel for Calley during his military trial on charges of being responsible for the deaths of more than 100 unarmed civilians in the Vietnamese hamlet of My Lai in 1968.

He said members of the Calley defense team are in touch with Charles Dean (Butch) Gruver of Statesburg, Mo., who was an Army private under Calley's command during the infantry sweep of My Lai.

The petition for a new trial will be based on testimony from Gruver.

"We still have work to do on putting together the evidence and working out more leads," Latimer said.

He indicated the preliminary work will take a week to 10 days and the petition will be filed within a "reasonable" time after that.

Latimer, a former Utah Supreme Court justice and veteran of service on the U.S. Military Court of Appeals, said he asked the government to find Gruver before Calley's March, 1971, conviction. But military authorities failed to locate him.

Gruver told an Oklahoma City newspaper last week that he had been available to testify more than a year ago, but was not asked to do so.

Latimer said members of the Calley defense team have obtained an affidavit from Gruver that is expected to be instrumental in the petition for retrial.

Calley is under house arrest at Ft. Benning, Ga. He was sentenced to life imprisonment, but the term was reduced to 20 years by Lt. Gen. Albert O. Connor, commander of the Third Army, who ruled that the life sentence was too harsh.

The reduction came after President Nixon had said he would intervene when Calley's case reached him, after all the military appeals and reviews are complete.

Appeal of the conviction is pending before the U.S. Army Court of Military Review in Washington, D.C., the second step in a reviewing process that President Nixon has said will ultimately end with him.

Latimer has applauded Nixon's intervention in the case, pointing out that the President is at the "top in the administration of military justice."

Latimer criticized the Army for "training peaceful people to become warlike and kill and then prosecuting them for action taken in a most difficult and complex war."

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. — President Nixon intends to run for re-election as an effective and respected world leader for peace who will attempt to depict Senator George McGovern's Vietnam peace proposals as irresponsible, or worse.

Nixon also will seek to pin much of the blame for inflation on the Democratic-run Congress. And, perhaps most significantly, he will appeal for broad support from Democrats disenchanted with McGovern's "radical" views.

These are some of the basic themes and tactics that have emerged in the comments of the long list of administration officials and presidential emissaries turned out for newsmen after recent meetings with Nixon at the western White House at San Clemente.

Many of these points were obvious from the back-to-back press conferences held over the weekend by former Treasury Secretary Connally and Secretary of State Rogers, both recently returned from around-the-world tours as Nixon's representatives.

Connally, the influential and conservative Texas Democrat, went to bat first. After declaring that most world leaders he'd seen "approve" and "applaud" Nixon's foreign policies, the former cabinet officer said flatly he "won't support" the Democratic national ticket this fall.

"I am going to do everything in my power to try to see that President Nixon is re-elected," Connally said. "I think for the first time in my life we have a clear choice in this country." While Connally said he didn't agree to any formal decision to establish a "Democrats for Nixon Committee," he said he planned to "encourage" other Democrats with similar views to support Nixon.

Connally coupled his support for Nixon — hardly unexpected after his cabinet service — with a mild statement of disinterest in the vice presidency and a strong attack on McGovern. "I don't have any ambition to be vice president," the Texas said. "I don't think I will be offered the vice presidency... but I am not going to close any doors with respect to future service."

Connally contrasted the "tremendous job" Nixon has done with McGovern's views, which he found "all too isolationist in character and also too radical in character."

Granting the South Dakotan "complete credit for... sincerity," Connally denounced the foreign and domestic policies of the Democratic standard-bearer. McGovern's proposed $30 billion defense spending cut by fiscal 1975 would mean "cutting the heart out of the defense establishment," Connally said.

In addition, Connally said, the McGovern welfare reforms represent the "height of fiscal irresponsibility" and the McGovern Vietnam peace plan "sabotages the efforts of this administration and of the peace negotiators in Paris to try to bring the war to an end on a negotiated basis."

Togers picked up this last theme, and it is increasingly apparent that Nixon administration plans to keep attacking what McGovern believes is his strongest flank — Vietnam.

In his Miami Beach acceptance speech, the Democratic presidential candidate promised to halt the bombing in Vietnam immediately after entering the White House. Then he declared: "Within 90 days of my inauguration, every American soldier and every American prisoner will be out of the jungle and out of their cells and back home in

Anti-Boyle campaign launched

HARLAN, Ky. (UPI)—Arnold Miller launched his campaign against W. A. (Tony) Boyle for the United Mine Workers presidency Sunday in southeastern Kentucky where the slain Joseph "Jack" Yablonski was afraid to campaign in the last election.

Miller, the candidate of the reform movement known as Miners for Democracy, said no threats would prevent him from discussing the issues with coal miners.

"We have come here to Harlan County and UMW District 19 to make it clear that the days of fear are over and the days of (UMW President) Tony Boyle's reign of tyranny over the good men of this union are numbered," Miller said.

The veteran of 24 years in the coal mines addressed a group of about 300 working and retired miners in Evans, Ky., about 10 miles east of here.

Miller's listeners largely seemed open to his reform ideas. They punctuated many of his sentences with remarks of "Amen, tell it like it is, brother." Miller encountered no trouble, verbal or otherwise during the rally. Police and sheriff's deputies were on hand.

Yablonski refused to campaign in District 19 in his bid for the union presidency in 1969, because threats were made on his life in newspaper ads warning him to stay out of eastern Kentucky. Yablonski, his wife and daughter were murdered in their Clarksville, Pa., home in December 1969, only three weeks after he lost the election to Boyle.

Storms pelt Northeast

By United Press International
Thunderstorms packing high winds, heavy rains and hail pounded the southern Midwest and Northeast Sunday. Flash flood warnings were posted for the upper South.

More than three inches of rain hit portions of western Tennessee. Flash flood warnings were issued for the area as streams and river tributaries overflowed their banks.

Dyersburg, Tenn., had more than two and a half inches of rain in six hours. Bradford, Pa., was doused with two inches.

Quarter size hail pummeled Anoka, Minn.,. Scattered showers and heavy thunderstorms hit the north central states and the Upper Mississippi Valley. A few storms rumbled through the Gulf States, southeast Atlantic seaboard and Florida.

Temperatures Sunday afternoon ranged from 51 at Cut Bank, Mont., to 99 at Needles, Calif.

America where they belong."

The Republican campaign attack on this pledge will come from three directions. They will charge:

— That it undermines the president's bargaining position in Paris. Asked about Connally's sabotage statement, Rogers said, "he (McGovern) would give our adversaries exactly what they want without any negotiations. To that extent,

I think it makes it extremely difficult for us." (Last week, Nixon directed that McGovern be briefed on foreign policy and defense matters; this might make it difficult for McGovern to escalate his Vietnam attack this fall, if secret talks should reach a sensitive point.)

— That neither a presidential candidate nor the president can guarantee, as McGovern did in Miami Beach, the release of American POWs.

— That, even if it worked, McGovern's Vietnam peace plan would cost too much in terms of lost U.S. prestige, influence and dependability in world affairs. Connally touched on this point when he said leaders of many small nations he visited "were particularly concerned that the U.S. not leave South Vietnam in disgrace or defeat."

Youth released for murder charged for another death

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—A 19-year-old youth, free on bail after pleading guilty to the murder of a policeman nearly three years ago, was in custody Sunday charged with suspicion of another killing.

Police said Alfredo Bryan, 19, was arrested Saturday night with three other youths following the fatal shooting of Javier Medina, 23, in what appeared to be gang war.

Bryan was free on bail pending a complicated appeal to the California Supreme Court involving whether he should be treated as an adult or a juvenile for his confessed murder of officer Jerry Maddox, 26, in August, 1969. Bryan was 16 at the time.

The case was shuttled between juvenile and adult courts before the state's high court decided he could be tried as a juvenile.

Bryan pleaded guilty to the charge and was ordered remanded to the California Youth Authority for an indeterminate period. The authority, however, refused to accept Bryan because he automatically would be freed at age 21. Authorities thought a longer incarceration was in order.

"The case was returned to Juvenile Court, which decided Bryan could be tried as an adult. His attorney then appealed for the charge to be dropped on the grounds of double jeopardy. Bryan was freed pending the outcome.

The case prompted Los Angeles Police Chief Edward M. Davis to write a bitter letter to California Chief Justice Donald Wright protesting what he called "yo-yo" justice.

In Saturday's incident, Medina was walking across a parking lot when a car with the four suspects approached him, police said. Three shots were fired. Medina died in a hospital a short time later.

In his letter last February, Davis pointed out that Bryan remained free for more than 2 1/2 years following the murder of Officer Maddox.

"There is an obvious problem in our criminal justice system when a murderer can spend two years manipulating the court system to his own ends," Davis said in his letter.

Ecology message

BRISTOL, N.H. (UPI)—A message in a bottle, found on the bottom of the Pemigewasset River Saturday, proved to be an antipollution appeal written "at least two summers ago" by a 16-year-old girl.

"Pick up this bottle to help stop pollution," said the note found by two biologists from the New Hampshire Fish and Game Department. "That's the least you can do for the water that has supplied you and your family for generations.

"If you don't, 20 years from now, you and your family behind you will be in serious danger."

Jennifer Wixson of Bristol said she wrote the note after she had spent a day picking up bottles near the river.

My Lai massacre witness found

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI)—Lt. William Calley's chief defense attorney said Sunday he would ask for a new trial as a result of the discovery of a new witness to the My Lai massacre.

"We will seek a new trial soon," said George W. Latimer, ranking legal counsel for Calley during his military trial on charges of being responsible for the deaths of more than 100 unarmed civilians in the Vietnamese hamlet of May Lai in 1968.

He said members of the Calley defense team are in touch with Charles Dean (Butch) Gruver of Stotesbury, Mo., who was an Army private under Calley's command during the infantry sweep of My Lai.

The petition for a new trial will be based on testimony from Gruver.

"We still have work to do on putting together the evidence and working out more leads," Latimer said.

He indicated the preliminary work will take a week to 10 days and the petition will be filed within a "reasonable" time after that.

Latimer, a former Utah Supreme Court justice and veteran of service on the U.S. Military Court of Appeals, said he asked the government to find Gruver before Calley's March, 1971, conviction. But military authorities failed to locate him.

Gruver told an Oklahoma City newspaper last week that he had been available to testify more than a year ago, but was not asked to do so.

Latimer said members of the Calley defense team have obtained an affidavit from Gruver that is expected to be instrumental in the petition for retrial.

Calley is under house arrest at Ft. Benning, Ga. He was sentenced to life imprisonment, but the term was reduced to 20 years by Lt. Gen. Albert O. Connor, commander of the Third Army, who ruled that the life sentence was too harsh.

The reduction came after President Nixon had said he would intervene when Calley's case reached him, after all the military appeals and reviews are complete.

Appeal of the conviction is pending before the U.S. Army Court of Military Review in Washington, D.C., the second step in a reviewing process that President Nixon has said will ultimately end with him.

Latimer has applauded Nixon's intervention in the case, pointing out that the President is at the "top in the administration of military justice."

Latimer criticized the Army for "training peaceful people to become warlike and kill and then prosecuting them for action taken in a most difficult and complex war."

Democrats will be blamed for inflation

Preparing for West End Fair

Try these tips for 'can that can'

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth in a series of articles that will be run throughout the summer on preparing for the West End Fair.

GILBERT — If you think fancy packed jars may be the ticket to a first prize at the West End Fair this year, you may be in for a disappointment, according to canning committee member Mrs. Frank Christman of Gilbert.

"The judges say you should avoid fancy packs unless there is a specific class for that," said the Gilbert housewife. "This should be avoided and I personally think it takes too much time to can like that."

According to the fair worker, now is the time when canning begins. She enumerated several reminders that should be followed in order to win a prize in August.

"The first, most important thing for contestants to do is to try to obtain a fair book from last year so they know what categories they can exhibit in," she said. "As far as I am concerned, this is the idea of the fair — to compete. Too many people try to exhibit in categories that aren't listed, thinking they will win a prize."

She emphasized it's important to sterilize jars and make sure there are no cracks in the tops. Also listed as important is canning in proper containers that make for attractive displays.

According to Mrs. Christman, the judges in the canning division insist all lids be new and clean. She added they often ask why a jar isn't full.

"They look at the uniformity of the canned goods and check to see if the liquid is clear in the jar," she continued. "Also, no food coloring is supposed to be used in the products, although they don't say anything about the coloring used in things like spiced pears."

When asked about the sediment that sometimes forms in the bottom of jars containing peas, corn and the like, Mrs. Christman said that would not effect the judging. She explained the sediment results from the cornstarch used to keep table salt flowing free. She suggested buying and using pure, bagged salt to eliminate the problem.

One question always raised in the canning category each year and which has never really been answered, is whether contestants have to raise the things they can.

According to some exhibitors and fair officials, if canned beans are exhibited, they should be raised by the contestant. Others say that it is perfectly acceptable to buy the vegetables to can.

Mrs. Christman said she did buy fruit to can, but "just wouldn't feel right about putting vegetables in" she didn't raise herself. She added, however, that she thought it was acceptable for others to do.

Although each contestant is able to enter a maximum of 25 jars in the canned, goods division, Mrs. Christman said this isn't happening any more. She commented that many of the older West End Fair women stopped entering because of poor health, but said young people are making up for that deficit.

"There is not nearly as much canned meat entered today as used to be," she said, "and it would be nice if women would enter things like dried fruits, home-cured, bacon and smoked sausage or ham."

She commented that no matter how long a woman canned, there are times when things spoiled. She advised a housewife should not get discouraged if this happens.

When asked if the judges tasted the canned goods, Mrs. Christman said they opened and tasted the jellies and jams, but not the other products. She said it was too much work and with a five day-fair all the products would be spoiled before they could be taken home.

Years ago, according to the volunteer, who has been working at the fair for the last eight years, the judges tasted everything. Said Mrs. Christman, "That's the only fair way to judge — by the way it tastes."

In some final last minute comments, Mrs. Christman said the vinegar solution has to be boiled hard to can pickles, peaches taste better with at least one pit left in the jar, and tomatoes, pears or peach halves should always be placed flat side down in the jar.

Canning advice

Frog Hollow

GILBERT — Did you ever stumble upon a special place and when you saw it for the first time, know it was extra charming and something out of the ordinary?

Last week I did. After getting lost on a return trip from Neola I meandered through a tiny hollow just outside of Brodheadsville that looked as if it could very well be the setting of an Uncle Remus tale.

Even its name — Frog Hollow — was enchanting. To the typical passerby, the place probably looks like any other in Monroe County. But to my romantic, imaginative mind, that hollow had to be full of local color, old tales and even a superstition or two.

A small babbling brook runs through the tiny valley and according to the residents, it will "sing you to sleep at night if your window is open."

Originally named Frog Hollow years ago because of a preponderance of the croakers, now the stream is only dotted with frogs and an occasional foot bridge or two.

That, however, does not make it any less charming. Looking as omnipotent as it did a hundred years ago, a huge stone mill, long since closed down, now stands sentry at the entrance to the hollow.

When I contemplated there might be some superstition about Frog Hollow, located just a mile from Rt. 209, I wasn't too far wrong.

The one thing I was told before leaving the tiny paradise was, "If you want to make a baby and if you want it to be a girl, don't make it here. Of all the children born in this hollow in the last 17 years, not one of them was a girl."

Since I left Frog Hollow I have been back many times and I know forever it will continue to be one of those special places I will not likely run into again.

BUSHKILL — Two Houston, Tex., residents were injured Thursday morning in a one-car crash on Route 209, six miles north of Bushkill.

State police at Milford said Emmett Treanor, 63, of Houston, Tex., was traveling north on Route 209 when his vehicle skidded on the wet pavement, crossed into the southbound lane, and flipped over.

Treanor and a passenger in his car, Eleanor Treanor, 55, also of Houston, were taken to the General Hospital of Monroe County by the Bushkill Fire Department ambulance.

The Treanor vehicle was demolished.

Canning advice

Frog Hollow

GILBERT — Did you ever stumble upon a special place and when you saw it for the first time, know it was extra charming and something out of the ordinary?

Last week I did. After getting lost on a return trip from Neola I meandered through a tiny hollow just outside of Brodheadsville that looked as if it could very well be the setting of an Uncle Remus tale.

Even its name — Frog Hollow — was enchanting.

To the typical passerby, the place probably looks like any other in Monroe County. But to my romantic, imaginative mind, that hollow had to be full of local color, old tales and even a superstition or two.

A small babbling brook runs through the tiny valley and according to the residents, it will "sing you to sleep at night if your window is open."

Originally named Frog Hollow years ago because of a preponderance of the croakers, now the stream is only dotted with frogs and an occasional foot bridge or two.

That, however, does not make it any less charming. Looking as omnipotent as it did a hundred years ago, a huge stone mill, long since closed down, now stands sentry at the entrance to the hollow.

When I contemplated there might be some superstition about Frog Hollow, located just a mile from Rt. 209, I wasn't too far wrong.

The one thing I was told before leaving the tiny paradise was, "If you want to make a baby and if you want it to be a girl, don't make it here. Of all the children born in this hollow in the last 17 years, not one of them was a girl."

Since I left Frog Hollow I have been back many times and I know forever it will continue to be one of those special places I will not likely run into again.

Preparing for West End Fair

Try these tips for 'can that can'

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth in a series of articles that will be run throughout the summer on preparing for the West End Fair.

GILBERT — If you think fancy packed jars may be the ticket to a first prize at the West End Fair this year, you may be in for a disappointment, according to canning committee member Mrs. Frank Christman of Gilbert.

"The judges say you should avoid fancy packs unless there is a specific class for that," said the Gilbert housewife. "This should be avoided and I personally think it takes too much time to can like that."

According to the fair worker, now is the time when canning begins. She enumerated several reminders that should be followed in order to win a prize in August.

"The first, most important thing for contestants to do is to try to obtain a fair book from last year so they know what categories they can exhibit in," she said. "As far as I am concerned, this is the idea of the fair — to compete. Too many people try to exhibit in categories that aren't listed, thinking they will win a prize."

She emphasized it's important to sterilize jars and make sure there are no cracks in the tops. Also listed as important is canning in proper containers that make for attractive displays.

According to Mrs. Christman, the judges in the canning division insist all lids be new and clean. She added they often ask why a jar isn't full.

"They look at the uniformity of the canned goods and check to see if the liquid is clear in the jar," she continued. "Also, no food coloring is supposed to be used in the products, although they don't say anything about the coloring used in things like spiced pears."

When asked about the sediment that sometimes forms in the bottom of jars containing peas, corn and the like, Mrs. Christman said that would not effect the judging. She explained the sediment results from the cornstarch used to keep table salt flowing free. She suggested buying and using pure, bagged salt to eliminate the problem.

One question always raised in the canning category each year and which has never really been answered, is whether contestants have to raise the things they can.

According to some exhibitors and fair officials, if canned beans are exhibited, they should be raised by the contestant. Others say that it is perfectly acceptable to buy the vegetables to can.

Mrs. Christman said she did buy fruit to can, but "just wouldn't feel right about putting vegetables in" she didn't raise herself. She added, however, that she thought it was acceptable for others to do.

Although each contestant is able to enter a maximum of 25 jars in the canned, goods division, Mrs. Christman said this isn't happening any more. She commented that many of the older West End Fair women stopped entering because of poor health, but said young people are making up for that deficit.

"There is not nearly as much canned meat entered today as used to be," she said, "and it would be nice if women would enter things like dried fruits, home-cured, bacon and smoked sausage or ham."

She commented that no matter how long a woman canned, there are times when things spoiled. She advised a housewife should not get discouraged if this happens.

When asked if the judges tasted the canned goods, Mrs. Christman said they opened and tasted the jellies and jams, but not the other products. She said it was too much work and with a five day-fair all the products would be spoiled before they could be taken home.

Years ago, according to the volunteer, who has been working at the fair for the last eight years, the judges tasted everything. Said Mrs. Christman, "That's the only fair way to judge — by the way it tastes."

In some final last minute comments, Mrs. Christman said the vinegar solution has to be boiled hard to can pickles, peaches taste better with at least one pit left in the jar, and tomatoes, pears or peach halves should always be placed flat side down in the jar.

Reporter warns students about trusting officials

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article was compiled by Marilyn Bush, winner of The Pocono Record's annual scholarship to Blair Summer School for Journalism. Miss Bush is a senior at Stroudsburg High School and will be co-editor of The Mountaineer next year.)

By MARILYN BUSH
BLAIRSTOWN, N.J. — "Never trust a public official," warned New York Times reporter David Burnham as he discussed investigative reporting of New York City corruption and graft.

Burnham described widespread corruption in the police department, court system and jails of New York City during a press conference held recently at the Blair Summer School for Journalism. He also expressed his opinions concerning investigative reporting and related some of his experiences as an investigative reporter.

Talking about corruption in the New York Police Department (NYPD), Burnham said, "The police department is the oldest bureaucracy in America. As long as you have gambling and the laws we have today, policemen are going to make money."

According to Burnham, it has also been proven that the NYPD is deeply involved in drug dealing.

Burnham spoke about his first investigation, exposing how corrupt policemen were regularly "cooping" on the job. Cooping is a slang term describing the practice of sleeping while on duty during 2 and 4 a.m. rather than patrolling beats.

"The police department is a bureaucracy two or three times larger than the FBI and much harder to control," Burnham said.

He listed three steps used by New York City Police Commissioner Patrick Murphy to weed out police corruption.

— Existing laws must be examined and revised to cut down on corruption. A law legalizing gambling could greatly reduce police graft in New York City, Burnham contended.

— Enough police supervisors must be assigned to adequately oversee the actions of individual policemen. Centralization must be curbed and a policy of "if you don't inform, it's your head" adopted.

— More competent people must be recruited into the police department.

"We must find a way to preserve the romantic heroism present in most rookie cops," Burnham added. "The city of New York has a much better police department than it did three years ago."

He felt this was a direct result of Commissioner Murphy's reforms.

Burnham also attributed improvements in the NYPD to the success of the Knapp Commission.

The commission, established partly as a result of Burnham's own exposes, is responsible for investigating New York City police corruption. It has instigated a general revamping of the department, prompting the removal of corrupt policemen and an increase of police investigators.

As a result of his investigation into New York City courts, Burnham discovered judges who worked only three to four hours a day, four days a week. This practice is partially responsible for the long delays encountered by New York citizens awaiting trial.

"Fortunately, because of the recent reforms, this backlog in the courts should be gone within two years," Burnham said.

Burnham acquired this cynical attitude after his investigations concerning New York City jails met with considerable public apathy.

Let's get people more interested

There is an interesting program going on in Fresno, Calif., in which a group of elected citizens in each neighborhood of the city determine what their neighborhood's problems are and then recommend solutions which, if approved, are funded by individual grants.

What's most interesting, though, is the premise behind the program: To bring more people into the local problem solving process and not leave it up to a few representatives who are hard-pressed to uncover, let alone act, on strictly local problems.

The whole thing got going because, as Mayor Ted Willis pointed out, "If political discussions or voter turnout are any indication, it is local government that interests people least. Yet it is local government that affects them most."

We have a pretty good proof of this attitude right here in Monroe County. In November, 1971, we elected a full slate of county officers, including two county commissioners, to determine solutions to our problems, appropriate money through a county-wide budget to deal with them, and generally handle the day-to-day business of running the area in which we live.

And yet, of a total of 21,197 registered voters in the county, only an estimated 9,727 bothered to cast their ballots for those county officers who would be spending their tax money in ways that directly affect them.

By way of contrast, in the last Presidential election, while choosing a president whose actions would affect us all, but indirectly, 17,403 voters out of a registered total of 21,163 turned out to the polls.

It's a sure bet that a similar proportion will turn out for this year's Presidential go-around, and also a sure bet that the next local elections will follow the sorry performances of their predecessors.

Perhaps we should take a leaf out of the Fresno program book. Form local neighborhood committees to probe into strictly neighborhood problems and come up with a series of solutions. Then take those problems and solutions to local officials and push hard for action.

The results probably won't be spectacular — Fresno has a healthy federal grant with which to implement its program — but at least it will bring more people into what is after all their business — running their own public affairs.

Coin corner

Years of British coins

By ROBERT SVENSSON
This is the year the Royal Mint of Great Britain will place 1,200 years of British history in the hands of fortunate coin collectors the world over.

The history will be struck in metal in the form of coins, each one a specimen such as Britain has used in its coinage system dating from prior to the Battle of Hastings.

Coin collectors are history-minded. This is a facet of collecting in which many people find great interest. The tumultuous history of England will give collectors much to ponder, and the new project of the Royal Mint will bring history to life.

Available right now are Proof Sets containing eight coins in denominations used by the United Kingdom continuously for more than 1,200 years. These are the coins of the system abandoned by the UK last year when the nation converted to the decimal system of coinage.

No such coins will ever be struck again.

The Millennium Proof Sets, as the group is called, consist of eight official proofs of shilling and pence coinage.

The eight coins in the set are: halfcrown, historic penny, half-penny, three-pence, sixpence, florin and English and Scottish shillings.

The very names conjure up exciting images.

The entire set is struck in Proof quality, comparing with United States Proof Sets. It is mounted on royal blue fabric and comes in a sonically welded see-through case, suitable for display. The price is $8 per set, plus mailing charges.

The purchasing power of these coins in historic perspective would be something like this: Henry VIII would have paid a halfcrown to purchase a week's supply of roast beef for his table.

A florin purchased a choice seat at the opera in the Theater Royal, Covent Garden, in 1849. An English shilling was a week's pay for a soldier facing Napoleon at the Battle of Waterloo. Threepence was a day's pay for a merchant seaman and a penny bought a pot of ale when he came ashore.

History is filled with mention of these coins. Owning a proof set of them should make many a collector happy.

'Whew!'

The Pennsylvania Story

Sterling role

HARRISBURG — One down, one to go — for Keystone State politicians that's the score on the presidential convention front now that Democrats have finished the somewhat wondrous chore of selecting Senator George McGovern as their November standard-bearer.

An equally wondrous chore faces Republicans come the week of August 21 when they too will name some gent to twist the GOP elephant's tail ("scattered" reports indicate that gent just "may" be President Nixon).

In any event, what certainly is worth noting is the sterling role Pennsylvania convention delegations seemingly have a penchant for playing during these gatherings of political braves — at just the right (or wrong) psychological moment.

Over the nominating convention years the Keystone State delegations — with the third largest delegate blocs of all the states — seemingly have had a driving determination, at times, to look like ninies, jumping on the wrong bandwagon at the wrong time, fiddle-faddling over critical decisions at the peak of crucial moments, sparking indecision when decision is most needed, and in general looking like bumpkins.

Such glorious activities are not confined to Republicans alone or Democrats alone; both have managed their share over the years.

Pennsylvania Democrats at last week's confab in Miami perhaps managed one of their more vibrant performances of bickering, indecision, fumbling and general leadership-less oafishness as new-bloods and know-nothings stumbled and twiddled.

As one national pundit expressed it: only the inane antics of the Ohio delegation prevented the Pennsylvania delegation from becoming the laughing stock of the convention.

Even the nominal head of such a delegation — the Governor — wasn't on hand for the festivities, perhaps convinced that it would be the better part of valor to stay away rather than face the obviously embarrassing possibility of not being elected delegation chairman and being caught in a factional fight over the leadership post.

Of course there was the devastating flood of a month ago that ripped Pennsylvania which His Excellency felt (honorably enough) demanded his presence here rather than in Miami; at least that was the explanation from the front office.

But be all this as it may, Keystone State Democrats have had their convention fling; now it's time for the Republican shuffle.

As we've already noted, that affaire presidential is scheduled for next month in the same village along Florida's east shore, in the same convention hall and in the same seats as that occupied by Democrats only last week.

It is doubtful though that Pennsylvania's delegate bloc to the GOP extravaganza will have much opportunity this time to stage any great show of dropping the ball as has happened on occasion in the past.

Certainly there is little question as to just who the delegation will support for the presidential nod for, as we have noted, "scattered" reports indicate that President Nixon is likely to be the only gent running — which certainly leaves little room for indecision on the part of the delegation.

That should just about wrap it up in a tight, neat wad for the Pennsylvania GOP delegation — providing of course the members can stay awake to at least answer roll calls. Theoretically the delegation should be faux pas-free for a change.

Letters to the Editor

Pocono Mountains honky-tonk?

Editor, The Record:

On a recent trip to the Pocono Mountains my husband and I were surprised, then angered to see a man selling paintings from a commercial trailer at the main intersection of Blakeslee Corners.

The beautiful, scenic Pocono Mountains are becoming distorted by gaudy, cheap, catch-your-eye paintings that apparently a vendor is able to sell after paying a nominal license fee.

Couldn't you just see it now — hot dog vendors, candy cotton salesmen, balloon men, T-shirt salesmen with your favorite hot rod painted on the front? This could be the start of a real circus-type atmosphere. One has to ask himself if this type of business should be continued.

Many people come to the mountains because of their natural beauty and to rest in a peaceful atmosphere away from the cities. However, now it seems that you're trying to turn the street corners into a boardwalk similar to the crowded shore!

I hope you print this letter. Maybe it will wake up some of the citizens of Blakeslee and they can stop this practice now before it gets out of control and you ruin your beautiful area in the Poconos.

MR. and MRS. SAMUEL REINER
Landsale

Festival litter unbelievable

Editor, The Record:

Many are the times I have opened your paper to find a photo of a junk yard or trailer court with a letter from some tourist complaining how they were marring the beauty of the Poconos.

Well today, Sunday, July 9, I had to pass through part of the Poconos on my way to Wilkes-Barre and the filth and debris that littered the highway from the hippies who attended the rock festival made the junk yards a pleasant sight. The mess they left behind was unbelievable.

Now this brings up another point. I have read in your paper time and time again of the expense the state went to to plant seedlings along Route 1-80 to hide Dave Katz's junk yard, which is only a few yards long.

What I saw today was miles of highway littered with filth and garbage and God only knows how many acres of property in the same condition. Now who is going to foot the bill for cleaning up the mess and property damage?

Probably the taxpayer, which I feel is quite unfair, because to be a taxpayer you have to be a working man so that means the ones that made the mess get off without paying a cent, because to them work is a four-letter word.

I feel that if the owners of the raceway want to sponsor these festivities they also should be held responsible for any damage they do, such as cleaning up the litter and any hospital bills left behind by the audience.

A VERY CONCERNED CITIZEN

Merry-go-round

How suite it was

By JACK ANDERSON

MIAMI BEACH — George McGovern won the presidential nomination in the Fontainebleau suite of Democratic National Chairman Larry O'Brien before the convention opened.

McGovern needed a favorable ruling from O'Brien on two key procedural questions. If O'Brien had ruled against him, McGovern would have been short of the votes he needed to win the crucial California credentials fight.

He was accompanied to O'Brien's suite by Connecticut's astute Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, a key member of McGovern's political brain-trust. They urged the beleaguered chairman, for the sake of party unity, to rule for McGovern.

Choosing their words carefully, they reminded O'Brien that McGovern's supporters were essentially the same people who had been shut out by the 1968 Democratic convention. They had worked long and hard for the nomination in 1972. If they should feel that they had been cheated again by a parliamentary ruling, they might split the party apart.

McGovern and Ribicoff were careful to make no threats but merely to describe the mood of their zealous followers.

O'Brien said he didn't intend to continue as party chairman. He has served without salary and he must get back to earning a living, he said.

McGovern and Ribicoff suggested pointedly that O'Brien shouldn't want to leave a splintered party as his legacy. The chairman got the message and later ruled McGovern's way.

One ruling gave McGovern 120 California delegates but denied his opponents the remaining 151 delegates for the crucial vote on seating the California delegation. The other ruling permitted the issue to be settled by a majority of delegates eligible to vote, rather than a majority of the full convention. This was worth another 70 votes for McGovern.

O'Brien intimidated?

Representatives of all the presidential candidates were summoned to a secret meeting where party counsel Joseph Califano and parliamentarian James O'Hara announced O'Brien's decision.

Max Kampelman, representing Hubert Humphrey, blurted angrily: "I just want you to communicate a message to the chairman from the Humphrey campaign committee. His rulings are appalling. We can see no legal basis for them. We must consider them to be acts of hostility."

Kampelman suggested that O'Brien had favored McGovern because he knew the Humphrey forces would remain loyal to the party but feared the McGovern forces might bolt.

The only explanation for O'Brien's rulings, snapped Kampelman, was "that the chairman has submitted to acts of intimidation."

Califano denied that there had been any "intimidation."

"The use of that word is charitable," shot back Kampelman.

The final roll call on the California seating confirmed that O'Brien's rulings had been essential to McGovern. Without them, he would have been 11 votes short. Then the Stop McGovern forces would have won and the McGovern bandwagon would have started to break down.

The four Democratic senators who were the prime contenders for their party's presidential nomination — McGovern, Humphrey, Muskie and Jackson — are now in debt to the taxpayers for more than $50,000.

This is the amount of senatorial salary which they have improperly collected while they were away from the Senate campaigning in presidential primaries.

Federal law provides that, "the Secretary of the Senate . . . shall deduct from the monthly payments of each member . . . the amount of his salary for each day that he has been absent from the Senate . . . unless such member assigns as the reason . . . the sickness of himself or some member of his family."

Based on information supplied by aides to the four men, McGovern was absent for 90 days, Humphrey 85, Muskie 69 and Jackson 65. Yet, during the periods of their absenteeism, they collected about $50,400 from the U.S. Treasury.

The taxpayers are not likely to get it back, however. The Secretary of the Senate is elected by the Senate and is about as rough on absentees as a truant officer would be if he were appointed by school children.

The present secretary, Francis Valeo, says he has been getting a number of letters demanding to know why he doesn't enforce the law. Valeo has a ready explanation: "The law," he says, "hasn't been enforced for over a century." Besides, he adds, just how a Senator should "pursue his responsibility to the Constitution and the people . . . is best judged by the Senator and the Senate."

Smiles of summer

Summer is . . .

A blue lake in the palm of a mountain, the icing melted. A teenage girl staring into a mirror, stunned by new freckles. A skinny old man standing on the edge of water, stooping to scoop handfuls for ancient shoulders. A bronze sun in the west, reluctant to set.

Middle-aged America dressing to the nines for one night of cocktails and cha-cha at the country club. An infant in diapers fighting round after round against the heat of night. Human lemmings, from Illinois to India, from Topeka to Tokyo, making the annual pilgrimage to the edge of the sea.

The whispering roar of air conditioners. The daily countdown to vacation time. Big baking cities with children playing in the bottom of the ovens. Bearded hippies in the park, prepared to solve the ills of the world without a medical license.

Liberated women who are tired of being sex objects wearing as little as possible to maintain their status as sex objects. The hour before dawn, when moist diamonds sparkle on the lawn. A barefoot boy with a bamboo pole and a stubborn expression walking across fields to a dark and cool running stream.

The industrious sound of bees. Small green apples hanging in an orchard, impatient to grow up and acquire a complexion. The lottery of leaves, spinning heads and tails, from bright side to dark, at the mercy of the gambling breeze. Hot iron faces in a steel bus.

A handful of bright confetti thrown into the night sky. An old lady rocking on the front porch with wool and needles, missing nothing that passes, never dropping a stitch. Birds staking a claim to a branch office. Trees in a valley reaching for the sun.

Fireflies winking at jet planes, which wink back. A white ship on a blue horizon, creating its own breeze. The irresistible urge for a late afternoon nap. Cold cuts and a salad for dinner. A hardhat perspiring as he watches a cold beer perspire down the outside of a glass.

The oil burner in cardiac arrest. The shocked expression of children who are asked to help with housework. The sweet smell of grass after it gets a butch haircut. The slides, the swings, the monkey bars, the sedate trot of carousel horses, ice cream cones, popples, little running feet wearing out sneakers — where in God's name do they get the energy?

A mother duck ordering eight frightened babies into the water, or else. Roses on a fence putting pink lips for a kiss. Corn in orderly regiments waving their arms for attention. Climbing up a rocky hill looking for wild raspberries and blackberries.

Cool craggy mountains looking high toward eternity. A gushing fire hydrant, the Coney Island of the ghetto. Seagulls complaining about their stomachs as they stand still in a pale sky. The sunny shadowless world of one P.M.

Young lovers hand-in-hand; he, dreaming of tonight; she, of tomorrow. A swift brook polishing round stones. A rainbow trout shattering the smooth pane of glass on top of a lake. A boa constrictor of traffic slithering on four-lane concrete.

Golf balls arcing everywhere, a summer hail storm. A rusting snow shovel in the back of the garage. A little girl in Mary Janes, white socks, pink starched dress, cool and aloof to barefoot boys, who wouldn't play with her in any case. Rheumy eyes in homes for the aged, incredulous at seeing one more summer.

Personal loans, an opportunity to pay for a two-week vacation in one year. The rare summer sound, through lifting curtains, of someone practicing scales on a piano. A commuter train, panting at a station. Off to the picnic grounds at dawn, where mother learns that everybody is hungry at ten A.M.

The sun suddenly closing dark lids over its eyes and the hush of birds as the wind vacuums the gutters and big drops of rain play the drums on rooftops and weep down windows. Executives leaving the office early "to beat the rush."

Iced tea. The dark cool of a tavern. Shuffled board. Horse races. Sleeping in pajama bottoms. Cleaning a small cut knee, not forgetting the antiseptic kisses. Tennis. The silent farm furrow of a canoe. Pale plus burn equals tan.

Anti-coagulants

My uncle has had a stroke. I have asked this question of doctors and don't seem to get a satisfactory answer.

Why have his doctors refused to use the blood-thinning drugs that one reads about for this condition?

Mrs. B.N., R.I.

Dear Mr. N.:
The decision to use or not to use anti-coagulant drugs for strokes and for coronary heart disease is a very difficult one to make.

There is no universal rule about their use. There are dozens of factors and the advantages and disadvantages must be carefully balanced.

Dr. Harry Gross, professor of medicine and cardiology at Montefiore Hospital in New York City, confirms the fact that anti-coagulant drugs are never used promiscuously.

You can be certain that your uncle would be given the blood-thinning or anti-coagulant, drugs if it would add, with safety, to his more rapid recovery.

Let's get people more interested

There is an interesting program going on in Fresno, Calif., in which a group of elected citizens in each neighborhood of the city determine what their neighborhood's problems are and then recommend solutions which, if approved, are funded by individual grants.

What's most interesting, though, is the premise behind the program: To bring more people into the local problem solving process and not leave it up to a few representatives who are hard-pressed to uncover, let alone act, on strictly local problems.

The whole thing got going because, as Mayor Ted Willis pointed out, "If political discussions or voter turnout are any indication, it is local government that interests people least. Yet it is local government that affects them most."

We have a pretty good proof of this attitude right here in Monroe County. In November, 1971, we elected a full slate of county officers, including two county commissioners, to determine solutions to our problems, appropriate money through a county-wide budget to deal with them, and generally handle the day-to-day business of running the area in which we live.

And yet, of a total of 21,197 registered voters in the county, only an estimated 9,727 bothered to cast their ballots for those county officers who would be spending their tax money in ways that directly affect them.

By way of contrast, in the last Presidential election, while choosing a president whose actions would affect us all, but indirectly, 17,403 voters out of a registered total of 21,163 turned out to the polls.

It's a sure bet that a similar proportion will turn out for this year's Presidential go-around, and also a sure bet that the next local elections will follow the sorry performances of their predecessors.

Perhaps we should take a leaf out of the Fresno program book. Form local neighborhood committees to probe into strictly neighborhood problems and come up with a series of solutions. Then take those problems and solutions to local officials and push hard for action.

The results probably won't be spectacular — Fresno has a healthy federal grant with which to implement its program — but at least it will bring more people into what is after all their business — running their own public affairs.

Years of British coins

By ROBERT SVENSSON

This is the year the Royal Mint of Great Britain will place 1,200 years of British history in the hands of fortunate coin collectors the world over.

The history will be struck in metal in the form of coins, each one a specimen such as Britain has used in its coinage system dating from prior to the Battle of Hastings.

Coin collectors are history-minded. This is a facet of collecting in which many people find great interest. The tumultuous history of England will give collectors much to ponder, and the new project of the Royal Mint will bring history to life.

Available right now are Proof Sets containing eight coins in denominations used by the United Kingdom continuously for more than 1,200 years. These are the coins of the system abandoned by the UK last year when the nation converted to the decimal system of coinage.

No such coins will ever be struck again.

The Millennium Proof Sets, as the group is called, consist of eight official proofs of shilling and pence coinage.

The eight coins in the set are: halfcrown, historic penny, half-penny, three-pence, sixpence, florin and English and Scottish shillings.

The very names conjure up exciting images.

The entire set is struck in Proof quality, comparing with United States Proof Sets. It is mounted on royal blue fabric and comes in a sonic-welded see-through case, suitable for display. The price is $8 per set, plus mailing charges.

History's worth

The purchasing power of these coins in historic perspective would be something like this: Henry VIII would have paid a halfcrown to purchase a week's supply of roast beef for his table.

A florin purchased a choice seat at the opera in the Theater Royal, Covent Garden, in 1849. An English shilling was a week's pay for a soldier facing Napoleon at the Battle of Waterloo. Threepence was a day's pay for a merchant seaman and a penny bought a pot of ale when he came ashore.

History is filled with mention of these coins. Owning a proof set of them should make many a collector happy.

The Pennsylvania Story

Sterling role

HARRISBURG — One down, one to go — for Keystone State politicians that's the score on the presidential convention front now that Democrats have finished the somewhat wondrous chore of selecting Senator George McGovern as their November standard-bearer.

An equally wondrous chore faces Republicans come the week of August 21 when they too will name some gent to twist the GOP elephant's tail ("scattered" reports indicate that gent just "may" be President Nixon).

In any event, what certainly is worth noting is the sterling role Pennsylvania convention delegations seemingly have a penchant for playing during these gatherings of political braves — at just the right (or wrong) psychological moment.

Over the nominating convention years the Keystone State delegations — with the third largest delegate blocs of all the states — seemingly have had a driving determination, at times, to look like ninnyes, jumping on the wrong bandwagon at the wrong time, fiddle-faddling over critical decisions at the peak of crucial moments, sparking indecision when decision is most needed, and in general looking like bumptkins.

Glorious activities

Such glorious activities are not confined to Republicans alone or Democrats alone; both have managed their share over the years.

Pennsylvania Democrats at last week's confab in Miami perhaps managed one of their more vibrant performances of bickering, indecision, fumbling and general leadership-less oafishness as new-bloods and know-nothings stumbled and twitched.

As one national pundit expressed it: only the inane antics of the Ohio delegation prevented the Pennsylvania delegation from becoming the laughing stock of the convention.

Even the nominal head of such a delegation — the Governor — wasn't on hand for the festivities, perhaps convinced that it would be the better part of valor to stay away rather than face the obviously embarrassing possibility of not being elected delegation chairman and being caught in a factional fight over the leadership post.

Of course there was the devastating flood of a month ago that ripped Pennsylvania which His Excellency felt (honorably enough) demanded his presence here rather than in Miami; at least that was the explanation from the front office.

But be all this as it may, Keystone State Democrats have had their convention fling; now it's time for the Republican shuffle.

As we've already noted, that affaire presidential is scheduled for next month in the same village along Florida's east shore, in the same convention hall and in the same seats as that occupied by Democrats only last week.

Doubtful opportunity

It is doubtful though that Pennsylvania's delegate bloc to the GOP extravaganza will have much opportunity this time to stage any great show of dropping the ball as has happened on occasion in the past.

Certainly there is little question as to just who the delegation will support for the presidential nod for, as we have noted, "scattered" reports indicate that President Nixon is likely to be the only gent running — which certainly leaves little room for indecision on the part of the delegation.

That should just about wrap it up in a tight, neat wad for the Pennsylvania GOP delegation — providing of course the members can stay awake to at least answer roll calls. Theoretically the delegation should be faux pas-free for a change.

Letters to the Editor

Pocono Mountains honky-tonk?

Editor, The Record:

On a recent trip to the Pocono Mountains my husband and I were surprised, then angered to see a man selling paintings from a commercial trailer at the main intersection of Blakeslee Corners.

The beautiful, scenic Pocono Mountains are becoming distorted by gaudy, cheap, catch-your-eye paintings that apparently a vendor is able to sell after paying a nominal license fee.

Couldn't you just see it now — hot dog vendors, candy cotton salesmen, balloon men, T-shirt salesmen with your favorite hot rod painted on the front? This could be the start of a real circus-type atmosphere. One has to ask himself if this type of business should be continued.

Many people come to the mountains because of their natural beauty and to rest in a peaceful atmosphere away from the cities. However, now it seems that you're trying to turn the street corners into a boardwalk similar to the crowded shore!

I hope you print this letter. Maybe it will wake up some of the citizens of Blakeslee and they can stop this practice now before it gets out of control and you ruin your beautiful area in the Poconos.

Festival litter unbelievable

Editor, The Record:

Many are the times I have opened your paper to find a photo of a junk yard or trailer court with a letter from some tourist complaining how they were marring the beauty of the Poconos.

Well today, Sunday, July 9, I had to pass through part of the Poconos on my way to Wilkes-Barre and the filth and debris that littered the highway from the hippies who attended the rock festival made the junk yards a pleasant sight. The mess they left behind was unbelievable.

Now this brings up another point. I have read in your paper time and time again of the expense the state went to to plant seedlings along Route 1-80 to hide Dave Katz's junk yard, which is only a few yards long.

What I saw today was miles of highway littered with filth and garbage and God only knows how many acres of property in the same condition. Now who is going to foot the bill for cleaning up the mess and property damage?

Probably the taxpayer, which I feel is quite unfair, because to be a taxpayer you have to be a working man so that means the ones that made the mess get off without paying a cent, because to them work is a four-letter word.

I feel that if the owners of the raceway want to sponsor these festivities they also should be held responsible for any damage they do, such as cleaning up the litter and any hospital bills left behind by the audience.

How suite it was

MIAMI BEACH — George McGovern won the presidential nomination in the Fontainebleau suite of Democratic National Chairman Larry O'Brien before the convention opened.

McGovern needed a favorable ruling from O'Brien on two key procedural questions. If O'Brien had ruled against him, McGovern would have been short of the votes he needed to win the crucial California credentials fight.

He was accompanied to O'Brien's suite by Connecticut's astute Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, a key member of McGovern's political brain-trust. They urged the beleaguered chairman, for the sake of party unity, to rule for McGovern.

Choosing their words carefully, they reminded O'Brien that McGovern's supporters were essentially the same people who had been shut out by the 1968 Democratic convention. They had worked long and hard for the nomination in 1972. If they should feel that they had been cheated again by a parliamentary ruling, they might split the party apart.

McGovern and Ribicoff were careful to make no threats but merely to describe the mood of their zealous followers.

O'Brien said he didn't intend to continue as party chairman. He has served without salary and he must get back to earning a living, he said.

McGovern and Ribicoff suggested pointedly that O'Brien shouldn't want to leave a splintered party as his legacy. The chairman got the message and later ruled McGovern's way.

One ruling gave McGovern 120 California delegates but denied his opponents the remaining 151 delegates for the crucial vote on seating the California delegation. The other ruling permitted the issue to be settled by a majority of delegates eligible to vote, rather than a majority of the full convention. This was worth another 70 votes for McGovern.

O'Brien intimidated?

Representatives of all the presidential candidates were summoned to a secret meeting where party counsel Joseph Califano and parliamentarian James O'Hara announced O'Brien's decision.

Max Kampelman, representing Hubert Humphrey, blurted angrily: "I just want you to communicate a message to the chairman from the Humphrey campaign committee. His rulings are appalling. We can see no legal basis for them. We must consider them to be acts of hostility."

Kampelman suggested that O'Brien had favored McGovern because he knew the Humphrey forces would remain loyal to the party but feared the McGovern forces might bolt.

The only explanation for O'Brien's rulings, snapped Kampelman, was "that the chairman has submitted to acts of intimidation."

Califano denied that there had been any "intimidation."

"The use of that word is charitable," shot back Kampelman.

The final roll call on the California seating confirmed that O'Brien's rulings had been essential to McGovern. Without them, he would have been 11 votes short. Then the Stop McGovern forces would have won and the McGovern bandwagon would have started to break down.

The four Democratic senators who were the prime contenders for their party's presidential nomination — McGovern, Humphrey, Muskie and Jackson — are now in debt to the taxpayers for more than $50,000.

This is the amount of senatorial salary which they have improperly collected while they were away from the Senate campaigning in presidential primaries.

Federal law provides that, "the Secretary of the Senate . . . shall deduct from the monthly payments of each member . . . the amount of his salary for each day that he has been absent from the Senate . . . unless such member assigns as the reason . . . the sickness of himself or some member of his family."

Based on information supplied by aides to the four men, McGovern was absent for 90 days, Humphrey 85, Muskie 69 and Jackson 65. Yet, during the periods of their absenteeism, they collected about $50,400 from the U.S. Treasury.

The taxpayers are not likely to get it back, however. The Secretary of the Senate is elected by the Senate and is about as rough on absentees as a truant officer would be if he were appointed by school children.

The present secretary, Francis Valeo, says he has been getting a number of letters demanding to know why he doesn't enforce the law. Valeo has a ready explanation: "The law," he says, "hasn't been enforced for over a century." Besides, he adds, just how a Senator should "pursue his responsibility to the Constitution and the people . . . is best judged by the Senator and the Senate."

Smiles of summer

Summer is . . .

A blue lake in the palm of a mountain, the icing melted. A teenage girl staring into a mirror, stunned by new freckles. A skinny old man standing on the edge of water, stooping to scoop handfuls for ancient shoulders. A bronze sun in the west, reluctant to set.

Middle-aged America dressing to the nines for one night of cocktails and cha-cha at the country club. An infant in diapers fighting round after round against the heat of night. Human lemmings, from Illinois to India, from Topeka to Tokyo, making the annual pilgrimage to the edge of the sea.

The whispering roar of air conditioners. The daily countdown to vacation time. Big baking cities with children playing in the bottom of the ovens. Bearded hippies in the park prepared to solve the ills of the world without a medical license.

Liberated women who are tired of being sex objects wearing as little as possible to maintain their status as sex objects. The hour before dawn, when moist diamonds sparkle on the lawn. A barefoot boy with a bamboo pole and a stubborn expression walking across fields to a dark and cool running stream.

The industrious sound of bees. Small green apples hanging in an orchard, impatient to grow up and acquire a complexion. The lottery of leaves, spinning heads and tails, from bright side to dark, at the mercy of the gambling breeze. Hot iron faces in a steel bus.

A handful of bright confetti thrown into the night sky. An old lady rocking on the front porch with wool and needles, missing nothing that passes, never dropping a stitch. Birds staking a claim to a branch office. Trees in a valley reaching for the sun.

Jet planes

Fireflies winking at jet planes, which wink back. A white ship on a blue horizon, creating its own breeze. The irresistible urge for a late afternoon nap. Cold cuts and a salad for dinner. A hardhat perspiring as he watches a cold beer perspire down the outside of a glass.

The oil burner in cardiac arrest. The shocked expression of children who are asked to help with housework. The sweet smell of grass after it gets a butch haircut. The slides, the swings, the monkey bars, the sedate trot of carousel horses, ice cream cones, popsicles, little running feet wearing out sneakers — where in God's name do they get the energy?

A mother duck ordering eight frightened babies into the water, or else. Roses on a fence putting pink lips for a kiss. Corn in orderly regiments waving their arms for attention. Climbing up a rocky hill looking for wild raspberries and blackberries.

Cool craggy mountains looking high toward eternity. A gushing fire hydrant, the Coney Island of the ghetto. Seagulls complaining about their stomachs as they stand still in a pale sky. The sunny shadowless world of one P.M.

Young lovers hand-in-hand; he, dreaming of tonight; she, of tomorrow. A swift brook polishing round stones. A rainbow trout shattering the smooth pane of glass on top of a lake. A boa constrictor of traffic slithering on four-lane concrete.

U.S. intelligence network has no trouble with spying

NEW YORK (UPI)—American intelligence techniques are so sophisticated that the United States keeps track of every Russian plane, missile-carrying submarine and troop unit and routinely listens to and decodes Soviet communications, according to a former intelligence analyst for the National Security Agency (NSA).

According to the analyst, the breadth of U.S. intelligence operations virtually precludes a surprise attack on the United States by the Russians.

The analyst, who used the pseudonym Winslow Peck, is a former Air Force sergeant assigned by the super-secret NSA to posts in Istanbul and Vietnam before he quit the service. He made his revelations in an article in the August edition of Ramparts magazine, published in Berkeley, Calif.

"As far as the Soviet Union is concerned," he said, "we know the whereabouts at any given time of all its aircraft, exclusive of its small private planes, and its naval forces, including its missile-firing submarines."

"The fact is that we're able to break every code they've got, understand every type of communications equipment and deciphering device they've got. We know where their submarines are, what every one of their VIPs is doing, and generally their capabilities and the dispositions of all their forces," he said.

The extent of NSA intelligence reaches to the identification of the pilot flying a specific Russian aircraft on a specific flight, according to Peck.

In addition NSA regularly monitors secret communications by other countries, including such allies as Great Britain, Israel and West Germany, Peck said.

For example, during the 1967 Six-Day War between Israel and the Arabs, Peck recalled, NSA learned that Gen. Moshe Dayan planned to order his troops to push to Cairo and Damascus but was called back and reprimanded.

Moreover, NSA learned that Soviet paratroops—the equivalent of the American Green Berets—were airborne from Bulgaria, apparently planning a troop drop into Israel. A call from then President Lyndon B. Johnson to Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin on the hot-line, warning of grave consequences of such a troop drop, persuaded the Russians to turn the planes around Peck said.

NSA also watched a television conversation between Kosygin and Cosmonaut Vladimir M. Komarov, who was aboard the ill-fated Soviet spaceship Soyuz 1, the article said.

The Russians had discovered that the craft's reentry parachutes would not function and that Komarov was doomed. Peck said. He said Kosygin was in tears during the emotional episode, which also included a segment in which Komarov told his wife how to handle their affairs after his death. Komarov was killed during reentry when his spacecraft burned up.

Peck asserted that American planes regularly violate the air space of the Soviet Union in order to activate their defensive reaction and thereby gauge the Russian defense plan.

Official statements from Washington consistently have denied that any authorized overflights over the Soviet Union have taken place since a U-2 aircraft piloted by Francis Gary Powers crashed in 1960.

As a sidelight to that incident, Peck said he had heard rumors repeatedly that Powers' plane was sabotaged by two Turks rather than shot down by a high-altitude Russian missile as reported. Peck said he could not confirm the rumors, however.

As for Soviet submarine movements, Peck said they are monitored by using radio triangulation—that is, pinpointing the spot where radio transmissions are made by picking up signals from at least three separate points—when submarines call their Russian headquarters.

Court's verdict due today

TEL AVIV (UPI)—Japanese guerrilla Kozo Okamoto, who has taken "full responsibility" for his admitted part in the Lod Airport massacre, will face the Israeli military court trying him for his life today for possibly the final time.

The tribunal was scheduled to deliver its verdict following the four-day trial and may announce sentence at the same time.

The 24-year-old former Kagoshima University student is charged with violation of four sections of the 1945 emergency regulations for his part in the May 30 airport massacre in which 26 persons were killed and 79 others wounded.

Conviction on any three of the charges carries the death penalty. Okamoto pleaded guilty to all four.

He told the court Thursday that he was a soldier in the militant Japanese United Red Army and that it was his "duty as a good revolutionary soldier" to carry out the attack.

His two Japanese companions were killed in the hail of bullets and explosions of hand grenades during the four-minute assault.

"I take full responsibility for the deaths and injuries at the airport," the short, black-haired defendant told the court. "The revolutionary warfare is a war of justice."

Continued violence claims lives of five in Ireland

BELFAST (UPI)—Bombings and shootings claimed five more lives in Northern Ireland Sunday as violence continued among the province's Protestants, the Roman Catholic minority and British troops sent in to keep peace.

About 6,000 Catholics left their Belfast homes to escape the mounting violence.

The latest deaths raised the fatality toll in three years of violence in the province to 444. Thirty-six persons have been killed since the Provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army (IRA) called off its cease-fire one week ago.

A mine that exploded under a British armored vehicle patrolling near Crossaglen on the Irish Republic border killed two soldiers.

An 18-year-old Catholic youth, Tobias Molloy, died in a clash between a rock-throwing gang and troops in the border town of Strabane.

A sniper killed a Belfast policeman, Robert Lavery, 18, a Protestant.

And Francis McKeown, 43, shot in the head in gun battles Saturday between IRA gunmen and troops in the Belfast area, died of his wounds in a hospital.

Some 6,000 Catholic men, women and children, led by a priest, the Rev. Jack Fitzsimmons, left the mixed Catholic Protestant Lendalton area, when the British army refused their demands that all troops be pulled out of the neighborhood.

The Catholics said the troops drew IRA gunfire and turned the area into a battleground.

"We are no longer prepared to be used as hostages of war," Father Fitzsimmons said. "We are showing the world we've had enough and will suffer no more."

The Catholics packed sandwich suppers, blankets and rugs and marched to a football stadium, where they planned to camp temporarily.

Organizers said cars would be sent to get the ailing and elderly who were too weak to march.

Catholic relief officials estimate about 6,500 Catholics have abandoned their homes to escape what they fear is an impending civil war with Protestants.

In a move to counter IRA bombing strikes, British commanders threw a ring of barbed wire and armored car checkpoints around downtown Belfast. Only buses, ambulances and other emergency vehicles were allowed through.

S. Viet paratroopers push into capital 'inch by inch'

SAIGON (UPI)—South Vietnamese paratroopers pushing "inch by inch, foot by foot" into Quang Tri city Sunday beat back a Communist attack and moved to within 200 yards of the inner fortress citadel, military sources said.

The sources also said U.S. commanders have ordered a halt to bombing raids within two miles of the center of the province capital in an attempt to cut down civilian casualties in the fight for the city.

"We are moving inch by inch, foot by foot and house by house," U.S. paratroop adviser Capt. Gail Furrow told UPI correspondent Donald A. Davis at a field base one mile south of Quang Tri. "We are advancing nearly two blocks a day, but we are moving forward."

Field officers told Davis that the Communists appeared to be slowly pulling back in the fighting inside Quang Tri. A North Vietnamese counterattack was beaten back at the city center Sunday and the paratroopers reported knocking out a Communist tank.

Furrow, 32, of Urbana, Ohio, said no government troops had yet entered the citadel. The 500-yard square fortress occupies the northeastern two-thirds of Quang Tri, which was captured by the Communists May 1 one month after the North Vietnamese offensive began.

The bomb hall, which came after hundreds of waves of jet fighter-bombers had leveled much of Quang Tri, was apparently ordered when it was discovered that many civilians remained in the city, the officers said.

The last raids inside Quang

Tri were last Wednesday, when Air Force jets dropped laser-guided "smart bombs" and breached the walls of the citadel, opening holes for an eventual South Vietnamese drive.

The sources said U.S. Navy ships, whose five and six-inch guns are considered much more accurate than bombs, would continue their strikes on known North Vietnamese positions inside Quang Tri.

Navy spokesmen Sunday reported one of the most successful shelling attacks on Quang Tri since the Communist offensive began March 30.

The destroyer Eversole hit a North Vietnamese ammunition dump three miles north of the city Saturday and caused "hundreds" of secondary explosions as the ammunition blew up, military sources said.

Davis reported a string of attacks behind the front lines of the paratroopers and marines driving on Quang Tri, and said that the North Vietnamese had begun mining key Highway 1 through the province during the night.

Two trucks hit mines Sunday on the highway and blew up 10 miles south of Quang Tri, Davis said.

In other action:

—Over North Vietnam Saturday, U.S. warplanes flew 240 strikes and knocked out four bridges on Highway 1 along the southern coast of that country, Navy spokesmen said.

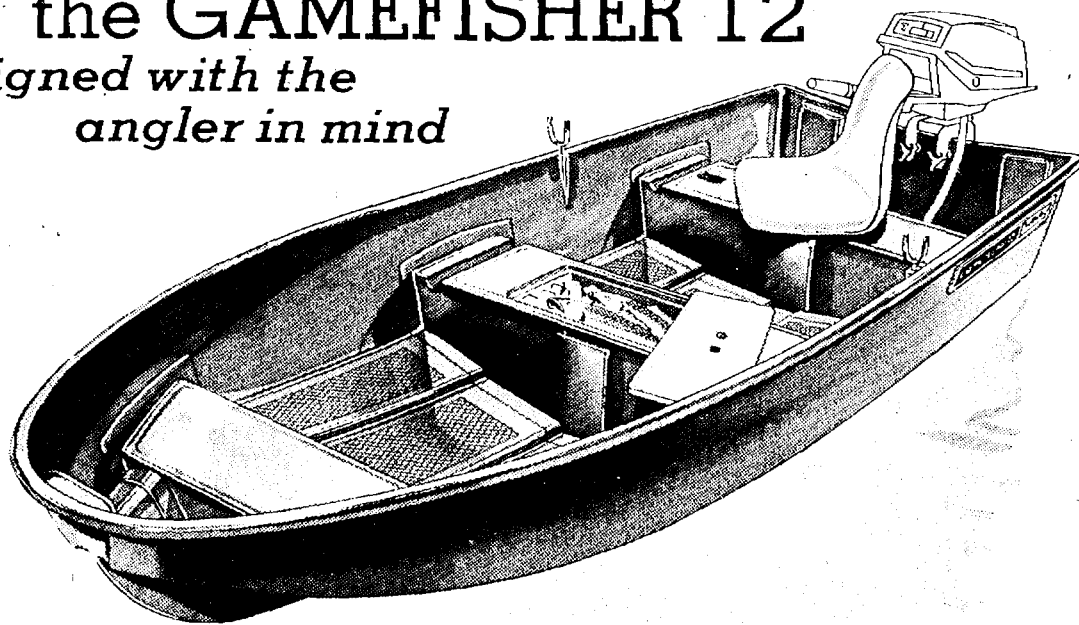

—Four waves of the B52s flew out of their sanctuaries in Guam and Thailand to strike about 35 miles north of Saigon in the 24 hours ending at noon Sunday.

U.S. intelligence network has no trouble with spying

NEW YORK (UPI)—American intelligence techniques are so sophisticated that the United States keeps track of every Russian plane, missile-carrying submarine and troop unit and routinely listens to and decodes Soviet communications, according to a former intelligence analyst for the National Security Agency (NSA).

According to the analyst, the breadth of U.S. intelligence operations virtually precludes a surprise attack on the United States by the Russians.

The analyst, who used the pseudonym Winslow Peck, is a former Air Force sergeant assigned by the super-secret NSA to posts in Istanbul and Vietnam before he quit the service. He made his revelations in an article in the August edition of Ramparts magazine, published in Berkeley, Calif.

"As far as the Soviet Union is concerned," he said, "we know the whereabouts at any given time of all its aircraft, exclusive of small private planes, and its naval forces, including its missile-firing submarines."

"The fact is that we're able to break every code they've got, understand every type of communications equipment and enciphering device they've got. We know where their submarines are, what every one of their VIP's is doing, and generally their capabilities and the dispositions of all their forces," he said.

The extent of NSA intelligence reaches to the identification of the pilot flying a specific Russian aircraft on a specific flight, according to Peck.

In addition NSA regularly monitors secret communications by other countries, including such allies as Great Britain, Israel and West Germany, Peck said.

For example, during the 1967 Six-Day War between Israel and the Arabs, Peck recalled, NSA learned that Gen. Moshe Dayan planned to order his troops to push to Cairo and Damascus but was called back and reprimanded.

Moreover, NSA learned that Soviet paratroops—the equivalent of the American Green Berets—were airborne from Bulgaria, apparently planning a troop drop into Israel. A call from then President Lyndon B. Johnson to Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin on the hotline, warning of grave consequences of such a troop drop, persuaded the Russians to turn the planes around Peck said.

NSA also watched a television conversation between Kosygin and Cosmonaut Vladimir M. Komarov, who was aboard the ill-fated Soviet spaceship Soyuz 1, the article said.

The Russians had discovered that the craft's reentry parachutes would not function and that Komarov was doomed. Peck said. He said Kosygin was in tears during the emotional episode, which also included a segment in which Komarov told his wife how to handle their affairs after his death. Komarov was killed during reentry when his spacecraft burned up.

Peck asserted that American planes regularly violate the air space of the Soviet Union in order to activate their defensive reaction and thereby gauge the Russian defense plan. Official statements from Washington consistently have denied that any authorized overflights over the Soviet Union have taken place since a U-2 aircraft piloted by Francis Gary Powers crashed in 1960.

As a sidelight to that incident, Peck said he had heard rumors repeatedly that Powers' plane was sabotaged by two Turks rather than shot down by a high-altitude Russian missile as reported. Peck said he could not confirm the rumors, however.

As for Soviet submarine movements, Peck said they are monitored by using radio triangulation—that is, pinpointing the spot where radio transmissions are made by picking up signals from at least three separate points—when submarines call their Russian headquarters.

Peck said he had

S. Viet paratroopers push into capital 'inch by inch'

SAIGON (UPI)—South Vietnamese paratroopers pushing "inch by inch, foot by foot" into Quang Tri city Sunday beat back a Communist attack and moved to within 200 yards of the inner fortress citadel, military sources said.

The sources also said U.S. commanders have ordered a halt to bombing raids within two miles of the center of the province capital in an attempt to cut down civilian casualties in the fight for the city.

"We are moving inch by inch, foot by foot and house by house," U.S. paratroop adviser Capt. Gail Furrow told UPI correspondent Donald A. Davis at a field base one mile south of Quang Tri. "We are advancing nearly two blocks a day, but we are moving forward."

Field officers told Davis that the Communists appeared to be slowly pulling back in the fighting inside Quang Tri. A North Vietnamese counterattack was beaten back at the city center Sunday and the paratroopers reported knocking out a Communist tank.

Furrow, 32, of Urbana, Ohio, said no government troops had yet entered the citadel. The 500-yard square fortress occupies the northeastern two-thirds of Quang Tri, which was captured by the Communists May 1 one month after the North Vietnamese offensive began.

The bomb halt, which came after hundreds of waves of jet fighter-bombers had leveled much of Quang Tri, was apparently ordered when it was discovered that many civilians remained in the city, the officers said.

The last raids inside Quang

Tri were last Wednesday, when Air Force jets dropped laser-guided "smart bombs" and breached the walls of the citadel, opening holes for an eventual South Vietnamese drive.

The sources said U.S. Navy ships, whose five and six-inch guns are considered much more accurate than bombs, would continue their strikes on known North Vietnamese positions inside Quang Tri.

Navy spokesmen Sunday reported one of the most successful shelling attacks on Quang Tri since the Communist offensive began March 30.

The destroyer Eversole hit a North Vietnamese ammunition dump three miles north of the city Saturday and caused "hundreds" of secondary explosions as the ammunition blew up, military sources said.

Davis reported a string of attacks behind the front lines of the paratroopers and marines driving on Quang Tri, and said that the North Vietnamese had begun mining key Highway 1 through the province during the night.

Two trucks hit mines Sunday on the highway and blew up 10 miles south of Quang Tri, Davis said.

In other action:

—Over North Vietnam Saturday, U.S. warplanes flew 240 strikes and knocked out four bridges on Highway 1 along the southern coast of that country, Navy spokesmen said.

—Four waves of the B52s flew out of their sanctuaries in Guam and Thailand to strike about 35 miles north of Saigon in the 24 hours ending at noon Sunday.

Court's verdict due today

TEL AVIV (UPI)—Japanese guerrilla Kozo Okamoto, who has taken "full responsibility" for his admitted part in the Lod Airport massacre, will face the Israeli military court trying him for his life today for possibly the final time.

The tribunal was scheduled to deliver its verdict following the four-day trial and may announce sentence at the same time.

The 24-year-old former Kagoshima University student is charged with violation of four sections of the 1945 emergency regulations for his part in the May 30 airport massacre in which 26 persons were killed and 79 others wounded.

Conviction on any three of the charges carries the death penalty. Okamoto pleaded guilty to all four.

He told the court Thursday that he was a soldier in the militant Japanese United Red Army and that it was his "duty as a good revolutionary soldier" to carry out the attack.

His two Japanese companions were killed in the hail of bullets and explosions of hand grenades during the four-minute assault.

"I take full responsibility for the deaths and injuries at the airport," the short, black-haired defendant told the court. "The revolutionary warfare is a war of justice."

Continued violence claims lives of five in Ireland

BELFAST (UPI)—Bombings and shootings claimed five more lives in Northern Ireland Sunday as violence continued among the province's Protestants, the Roman Catholic minority and British troops sent in to keep peace.

About 6,000 Catholics left their Belfast homes to escape the mounting violence.

The latest deaths raised the fatality toll in three years of violence in the province to 444. Thirty-six persons have been killed since the Provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army (IRA) called off its cease-fire one week ago.

A mine that exploded under a British armored vehicle patrolling near Crossaglen on the Irish Republic border killed two soldiers.

An 18-year-old Catholic youth, Tobias Molloy, died in a clash between a rock-throwing gang and troops in the border town of Strabane.

A sniper killed a Belfast policeman, Robert Lavery, 18, a Protestant.

And Francis McKeown, 43, shot in the head in gun battles Saturday between IRA gunmen and troops in the Belfast area, died of his wounds in a hospital.

Some 6,000 Catholic men, women and children, led by a priest, the Rev. Jack Fitzsimmons, left the mixed Catholic Protestant Lendagone area, when the British army refused their demands that all troops be pulled out of the neighborhood.

The Catholics said the troops drew IRA gunfire and turned the area into a battleground.

"We are no longer prepared to be used as hostages of war," Father Fitzsimmons said. "We are showing the world we've had enough and will suffer no more."

The Catholics packed sandwich suppers, blankets and rugs and marched to a football stadium, where they planned to camp temporarily.

Organizers said cars would be sent to get the ailing and elderly who were too weak to march.

Catholic relief officials estimate about 6,500 Catholics have abandoned their homes to escape what they fear is an impending civil war with Protestants.

In a move to counter IRA bombing strikes, British commanders threw a ring of barbed wire and armored car checkpoints around downtown Belfast. Only buses, ambulances and other emergency vehicles were allowed through.

Highway extension

LANSING Mich. (UPI) — Work is under way on the final section of Interstate 75 in Michigan with the 4.4-mile extension in Ogemaw County expected to be open to traffic by late 1973.

Interstate 75 extends from Miami, Fla., to Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., a distance of nearly 1,600 miles. The highway is about 90 per cent complete.

Donna Lynn Dahlman bride of James Singer

PORTLAND — Miss Donna Lynn Dahlman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Dahlman of Portland became the bride of James E. Singer on July 8 at 10 a.m. at the Portland Presbyterian Church.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clair J. Singer, Cherry Valley Road, Delaware Water Gap.

Rev. George Godcock officiated at the ceremony. The bride was given in marriage by her father and attended by Miss Cynthia Hochrein of Portland as maid of honor.

David Clarkson, R.D. 1, Stroudsburg, was best man.

A reception was held at The Stratford Hotel.

The bride is a 1972 graduate of Bangor High School and the bridegroom a 1969 graduate of Stroudsburg High School.

Just Between Us—

By Bobby Westbrook

One disadvantage of taking a vacation early in the year is that you sit home with the daily showers while everybody else, it seems, is traveling around. The wonder is that more of them aren't bumping into each other.

Gracie Heitler, Stroudsburg school nurse now touring the Scandinavian countries with an NEA tour, did feel at home in Copenhagen when the high school band from West Gate High School in Los Angeles turned up at their hotel where two of their school nurses were also staying.

They had played for the Dances' celebration of our Fourth of July and had been invited to a party afterward by the Queen. Gracie wrote from Stockholm in what she called "Swonderful Swonderful Sweden."

The Slim Gourmet

By BARBARA GIBBONS

"Treat your family like company," urges the TV commercial. It goes on to suggest the sponsor's dessert, a last-minute affair that's ready to eat in 15 minutes or less... as if your husband and the kids dropped in for dinner unexpected.

Well, maybe they did. Sociologists tell us that the American family meal hour is becoming a myth, what with commuting husbands, working wives and all those after-school activities. Getting everybody around the table at once is a special occasion; no wonder that TV wife lit the candles and got out her best china.

Fattening Mixes

Which gets us back to that last-minute dessert, the one that sets in 15 minutes or less. The problem is that most packaged mixes are so fattening... close to 200 calories a scanty half-cup serving. (One of the newest mix-and-serve desserts is so sweet you can almost feel your teeth fall out.) Now, a family that sustains itself mainly on bar pretzels and maltshop snacks probably doesn't need a calorie-laden dessert. What's a mother to do?

Here's an elegant sweet that sets even quicker than the packaged mixes, yet it's

She might, if she had known, had other local encounters in Stockholm where the son of one of her former schoolmates, Chris Wheeler, is working for the summer.

And, as if that weren't enough, in the same mail I got a letter from my daughter-in-law in England stating that she and the two boys are spending two weeks in Stockholm with the Wheelers and other friends.

Just at the moment, I don't know anybody who is in Norway which is the next point on the NEA tour, but they'll probably meet somebody else from Delaware Water Gap there.

I can remember when our big trip of the summer was to take the kids on the train from East Stroudsburg to Portland.

every bit as easy to make. You whip it up with your blender, using low-fat ice milk. Be sure to use a brand of ice milk that's really low-fat... 97 percent fat free, at least. Look for the butterfat content on the label.

Speedy Strawberry Swirl

2 envelopes unflavored gelatin

1/2 cup boiling water

1/2 cups skimmed milk

3 tablespoons sugar (or sugar substitute)

1/2 cups vanilla or strawberry ice milk (97 percent fat free)

1 cup fresh strawberries (or frozen whole unsweetened berries)

Empty the gelatin into your blender container. Pour on the boiling water and blend on high speed. Scrape down the sides of the container with a rubber spatula and blend again so that all the gelatin is dissolved.

Add sugar (or substitute), skim milk and strawberries. Blend on high speed.

Add ice milk and blend only until smooth and creamy. Don't overblend.

Put blender in refrigerator for 15 minutes.

Juniors win national award

Faye Coutts Paupack bride

PAUPACK — Miss Faye Ellen Coutts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Coutts, Paupack and Gary G. Graff, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Graff, Upper Darby were united in marriage on June 24, 1972 at 7 p.m. in the Paupack United Methodist Church. The Rev. Gail Wintermute, pastor, performed the wedding ceremony in a candlelight setting. The church was decorated with white altar flowers.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a traditional length gown of sate peau and peau d'ange lace in an empire A-line silhouette. The high bodice featured a standup collar of lace and long, fitted sleeves ending with ruffle at the wrists. Peau d'ange lace embellished with seed pearl clusters paneled the bodice, sleeves, skirt front and encircled the hemline. A butterfly bow trimmed the back of the gown. Her chapel length mantilla of illusion, edged with scalloped lace, featured a V-panel of lace and topped by a blusher. It cascaded from her cap of lace and pearls. She carried a bouquet of white stephanotis pink sweetheart roses and a white orchid. The bride is wearing a wedding band which belonged to her great great grandmother.

Miss Nan Louise Coutts, sister of the bride, the maid of honor wore a floor length gown of flowered organza over orchid taffeta featuring full, long sleeves with wide cuffs, and a standup collar. An orchid bow was tied at the empire waistline. She carried a basket of pink and orchid daisies, and wore a halo of daisies in her hair.

Miss Dulcie Coutts of Paupack, Miss Gina Graff of Upper Darby and Miss Lorraine Kulesa of Clifton Heights wore gowns matching that of the maid of honor, except in pink. They, too, carried baskets of daisies and wore daisy halos in their hair.

Gregory Graff, Glenolden was the best man. The ushers were Joseph Gregorski of Philadelphia, Robert D'Alfonso of Broomall and George Coutts, Jr., Paupack.

The bride's mother wore a street length dress of blue lace over taffeta, and white accessories. The mother of the bridegroom was attired in a street length dress of apricot lace over taffeta and matching accessories. They each wore corsages of white sweetheart roses.

Mrs. Gary G. Graff

The reception was held at the home of the bride, immediately following the ceremony.

After a wedding trip to Nova Scotia, Mr. and Mrs. Graff are residing in Port Republic, Md.

The former Miss Coutts, and her husband are graduates of West Chester State College. Mrs. Graff teaches French at Calvert Senior High School, Prince Frederick, Md. and Mr. Graff is seeking a teaching position.

SCIATIC NEURITIS By Dr. Thomas F. Snyder D.C.

Sciatic Neuritis, better known as Sciatica, is an in-coordination of the great sciatic nerve which supplies the muscle and bone tissue of the thigh and lower leg. Pain, in most cases is due to inflammation of the sciatic nerve. Nervous tissue like all other tissue of the body requires nervous energy in order to function properly. A lack of this nervous energy results in in-coordination of the sciatic nerve. In every case there is a point of interference with the nervous impulse flow which is found somewhere between the brain and the sciatic nerve proper.

Chiropractors have been locating and removing the causes of this interference which is the cause of the in-coordination in Sciatic Neuritis and thereby, makes possible a complete recovery.

If you are suffering from Sciatica, have a talk with a Chiropractor. I am sure you will find it most beneficial.

(One of a series of articles published in the public interest to illustrate and explain the scientific practice of Chiropractic, written by Dr. Thomas F. Snyder, Chiropractic Orthopedist, Brodheadsville, Pa., 18322. Ph. 992-4787.)

Her fiancé is a 1968 graduate of Parkland Senior High School and has served three years in the Marine Corps. He is a student attending Lehigh County Community College.

No date has been set for the wedding.

And, as if that weren't enough, in the same mail I got a letter from my daughter-in-law in England stating that she and the two boys are spending two weeks in Stockholm with the Wheelers and other friends.

Just at the moment, I don't know anybody who is in Norway which is the next point on the NEA tour, but they'll probably meet somebody else from Delaware Water Gap there.

I can remember when our big trip of the summer was to take the kids on the train from East Stroudsburg to Portland.

Just Between Us—

By Bobby Westbrook

One disadvantage of taking a vacation early in the year is that you sit home with the daily showers while everybody else, it seems, is traveling around. The wonder is that more of them aren't bumping into each other.

Gracie Heitler, Stroudsburg school nurse now touring the Scandinavian countries with an NEA tour, did feel at home in Copenhagen when the high school band from West Gate High School in Los Angeles turned up at their hotel where two of their school nurses were also staying.

They had played for the Danes' celebration of our Fourth of July and had been invited to a party afterward by the Queen. Gracie wrote from Stockholm in what she called "Sworderful Swonderful Sweden."

The Slim Gourmet

By BARBARA GIBBONS

"Treat your family like company," urges the TV commercial. It goes on to suggest the sponsor's dessert, a last-minute affair that's ready to eat in 15 minutes or less . . . as if your husband and the kids dropped in for dinner unexpected.

Well, maybe they did. Sociologists tell us that the American family meal hour is becoming a myth, what with commuting husbands, working wives and all those after-school activities. Getting everybody around the table at once is a special occasion; no wonder that TV wife lit the candles and got out her best china.

Fattening Mixes

Which gets us back to that last-minute dessert, the one that sets in 15 minutes or less. The problem is that most packaged mixes are so fattening . . . close to 200 calories a scanty half-cup serving. (One of the newest mix-and-serve desserts is so sweet you can almost feel your teeth fall out.) Now, a family that sustains itself mainly on bar pretzels and maltshop snacks probably doesn't need a calorie-laden dessert. What's a mother to do?

Here's an elegant sweet that sets even quicker than the packaged mixes, yet it's every bit as easy to make. You whip it up with your blender, using low-fat ice milk. Be sure to use a brand of ice milk that's really low-fat . . . 97 percent fat free, at least. Look for the butterfat content on the label.

Speedy Strawberry Swirl
2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
1/2 cup boiling water
1 1/2 cups skimmed milk
3 tablespoons sugar (or sugar substitute)
1 1/2 cups vanilla or strawberry ice milk (97 percent fat free)
1 cup fresh strawberries (or frozen whole unsweetened berries)

Empty the gelatin into your blender container. Pour on the boiling water and blend on high speed. Scrape down the sides of the container with a rubber spatula and blend again so that all the gelatin is dissolved.

Add sugar (or substitute), skim milk and strawberries. Blend on high speed.

Add ice milk and blend only until smooth and creamy. Don't overblend.

Pu blender in refrigerator for 15 minutes.

Swirl the dessert into 10 stemmed sherbet glasses. Garnish with whole berries if desired. Chill until serving time.

Makes 10 half cup servings, 79 calories each if made with sugar; 64 if made with sugar substitute.

SUGARLESS STRAWBERRY SWIRL: on a sugar-free diet? Make this dessert with sugar-free dietetic ice cream and sugar substitute (the calorie count will be slightly higher because dietetic ice cream has more butterfat than low-fat milk). Seventy calories per serving.

Many mixes are calorie bargains if you ignore the package directions and apply your own Slim Gourmet calorie-saving tricks! Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 25 cents to "SLIM GOURMET MIX TRICKS," in care of this newspaper, 50 West Shore, Sparta, New Jersey 07871.

Faye Coutts Paupack bride

PAUPACK — Miss Faye Ellen Coutts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Coutts, Paupack and Gary G. Graff, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Graff, Upper Darby were united in marriage on June 24, 1972 at 7 p.m. in the Paupack United Methodist Church. The Rev. Gail Wintermute, pastor, performed the wedding ceremony in a candlelight setting. The church was decorated with white altar flowers.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a traditional length gown of sata peau and peau d'ange lace in an empire A-line silhouette. The high bodice featured a standup collar of lace and long, fitted sleeves ending with ruffle at the wrists. Peau d'ange lace embellished with seed pearl clusters paneled the bodice, sleeves, skirt front and encircled the hemline. A butterfly bow trimmed the back of the gown. Her chapel length mantilla of illusion, edged with scalloped lace, featured a V-panel of lace and topped by a blusher. It cascaded from her cap of lace and pearls. She carried a bouquet of white stephanotis pink sweetheart roses and a white orchid. The bride is wearing a wedding band which belonged to her great great grandmother.

Miss Nan Louise Coutts, sister of the bride, the maid of honor wore a floor length gown of flowered organza over orchid taffeta featuring full, long sleeves with wide cuffs, and a standup collar. An orchid bow was tied at the empire waistline. She carried a basket of pink and orchid daisies, and wore a halo of daisies in her hair.

Miss Dulcie Coutts of Paupack, Miss Gina Graff of Upper Darby and Miss Lorraine Kulesa of Clifton Heights wore gowns matching that of the maid of honor, except in pink. They, too, carried baskets of daisies and wore daisy halos in their hair.

Gregory Graff, Glenolden was the best man. The ushers were Joseph Gregorski of Philadelphia, Robert D'Alfonso of Broomall and George Coutts, Jr., Paupack.

The bride's mother wore a street length dress of blue lace over taffeta, and white accessories. The mother of the bridegroom was attired in a street length dress of apricot lace over taffeta and matching accessories. They each wore corsages of white sweetheart roses.

Mrs. Gary G. Graff

The reception was held at the home of the bride, immediately following the ceremony.

SCIATIC NEURITIS

By Dr. Thomas F. Snyder D.C.

Sciatic Neuritis, better known as Sciatica, is an in-coordination of the great sciatic nerve which supplies the muscle and bone tissue of the thigh and lower leg.

Pain, in most cases is due to inflammation of the sciatic nerve. Nervous tissue like all other tissue of the body requires nervous energy in order to function properly. A lack of this nervous energy results in in-coordination of the sciatic nerve. In every case there is a point of interference with the nervous impulse flow which is found somewhere between the brain and the sciatic nerve proper.

Chiropractors have been locating and removing the causes of this interference which is the cause of the in-coordination in Sciatic Neuritis and thereby, makes possible a complete recovery.

If you are suffering from Sciatica, have a talk with a Chiropractor. I am sure you will find it most beneficial.

Jack O'Brian's

New York's Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — O'Brian At Large: There's something rotten in Television and it's not only "All in the Family" or the slanting of news nor the length or taste of the commercials: It's the Emmys.

This annual flat imitation of the Oscars award shows, in turn a pale vulgarization of the smartly accomplished Tony Awards, manages to extend its insulting stupidities year into year. Each season-end the Emmys appear on TV and the annual accurate criticism is of its endless categories. Each post-Emmy orgy of critical im-molation results in a yearly reevaluation of categories, and annually somehow, the next Emmy Awards include more categories.

But even that multi-irritation isn't what affects TV. The Tony Awards, culled from the more important art form of the theater but which still affects smaller Broadway audiences than films, which in turn haul in fewer fans than television, is perfectly able intelligently to reflect the limited legitimate stage and all its works and romps. No TV viewer can be satisfied with the Emmys. Nor impressed.

There was plenty to be depressed about: The frightening fact is that the Emmy Awards propose to emphasize the telecasting influential who in all communicative ways serve the public — 24 hours a day! The day-to-day banalities are one thing; the Emmy Awards, a year in preparation, cannot even collect talents and creators into the allotted time of the annual program; make that annual silliness.

Television is the medium in which the best movies are butchered to fill around the far more delicately treated commercials. The 90-minute movies, for instance, end right on the clock's dot; in fact, several minutes before the dot to make room for the final commercials. One network station's movie handler told us, our oath, he managed to make his late-late commuter train after midnight, when the movie being shown was longer than his suburban conductor would wait, simply by lifting out one or two entire reels of the film, always with savage injury to its continuity and credibility; but he always made his train; and never once was called on the network station's carpet to answer for the disgraceful mutilation! The viewers went to bed mystified and made; the executives slept on, but stay up for the Emmys.

Did 24 writers really have to tramp on stage to honor the Carol Burnett Show? Ego is ego, but why not just the head writer? Carol is a fine comic lady — and now 50 million viewers are convinced she can't arise and say good morning without a gagwriter.

The truly important winners of TV news awards were voted early and a phalanx of previously announced winners flown to Hollywood to stand in a row to be named best in their assorted news categories. One spoke for all. In this most important of TV categories, the winners just stood there; meanwhile 24 pieces of Carol Burnett's sense of humor trailed onstage and stopped the show just when it was going bad. Why not simply let one head writer — or Carol — explain a variety show with multiple-guest stars needs that small army to activate Carol's clowning.

And did it really take the "governors" of the TV Academy all year, all those years, to differentiate between a 26-week series and a dramatic series imported from Britain. The braided categories are no different to-day than early TV when Bishop Fulton J. Sheen competed for an Emmy with Milton Berle.

Now to another essential TV trauma: in that class wherein English drama competed with widely disparate domestic shows, it's pertinent to not that nothing American TV did in its then-past season compared; nothing! U.S. TV has its triumphs; we insist the Mary Tyler Moore Show is a marvelously particular-American series which can't be topped in any way; why therefore hasn't Mary Tyler Moore herself won one single Emmy over the several seasons of this recognized splendid series? As for Archie Emmy Archie Bunker, who has walked off with a couple of seasons of Emmy Awards, did anyone there note it is an outright imitation of another English series? Shouldn't it have received an award for Best Foreign Larceny instead?

It's a scary notion — the TV "experts" who put on the annual Emmy Awards show, and the recipients of the awards as we watched them in all their tasteless dullness and cheap pretensions — are precisely the same "creative" characters who in one way or another, day in and week out and month over month and year after year, pour their inanities into your living rooms in the most powerful medium devised in the history of communications.

Ann Landers

Ashes anxiety

Dear Ann Landers: Your advice to "Franny Kat" gave me the courage I needed to write about a problem that has been bothering me for a long time.

"Franny Kat" was a widow whose second husband carried his first wife's picture in his wallet for two years. She was afraid to look and see if it was still there. It made her very sad that he couldn't give it up. You said, "Don't look.

Simply buy him a new wallet and put your picture in it."

Three years ago I married a widower. Quite by accident I ran across his first wife's ashes in our garage. The ashes are in an urn, packed in a box — the same box they were shipped in by the state.

I feel uneasy about this but I've never said anything. I believe the best place for the ashes is in a cemetery. What should I do?

Dear S.W.: Inform your husband that you have come across the "box" and you feel the garage is not an appropriate place for it. Tell him that many people who request cremation ask that their ashes be strewn over a lake, or a river, or a favorite meadow. A friend of mine has requested that her ashes be put in an urn and placed in the Pump Room in Chicago — and I'm not kidding.

Dear Ann Landers: I've been married for three years to a man who never was much of a talker but I've always had the feeling the quiet fellows are the real hell-raisers. Now it appears my hunch may be right.

I just discovered what I thought was his mother's recipe box — one of those wooden, kitchen-type index files—jammed with names, addresses, telephone numbers, dimensions, and a few comments which appear to be performance ratings.

I have not told my husband I found it. Should I? He never goes anywhere without me (that I know of) and I have no reason to suspect that he is seeing anyone. But I'm baffled as to why he hangs on to the junk if he has no use for it. What should I do?

Wanda

Dear Wan: Keep your peapickin' hands off your husband's property. He probably keeps it for the same reason some women hang on to their old high school and college relics.

Dear Ann Landers: The man I'm going with is 30 years old. His father died when he was 13. His mother won't let him live his own life. The problem is sleeping pills. He eats them like candy. He is in a daze most of the time. His mother's cousin is a druggist and she gets pills for next to nothing — no prescription. He is also a big beer drinker. I've read in your column that people who take pills should not mix them with liquor because the combination could be deadly. I've clipped those columns and showed them to him. He says beer doesn't count. Is he right?

Belinda

Dear Bel: He's wrong. Beer contains alcohol and if he drinks enough beer he can get just as bombed as if he were drinking gin. Pills and beer can be a lethal combination.

Erma Bombeck

Traffic woes

My husband says I overreact to a traffic ticket. That's not true. I know a lot of women who cry for three days. And sell the car. And try to retain F. Lee Bailey to defend them.

The trouble with men is they do not have the proper respect for a traffic ticket. To them, it is a sign of manhood, like drinking a quart of beer without belching. To women, it's an emotional trauma, comparable to Hester wearing a large "A" on her chest that stands for Auto Violation.

My husband considers my traffic tickets the greatest source of humor since Milton

Berle wore a dress. As a high school graduate, I consider them a humiliation.

I have received three citations in 23 years of driving. The first one was in 1950, when I made a U-turn in front of a paddy wagon. I know what you're thinking. You're thinking I didn't see the paddy wagon. Wrong. In my mind, I humanized the police officer, rationalizing he was a man who took out the garbage, stood in line at the circus, and knew the agonies of circling the parking 18 times only to see a black spot on the other side.

If I live to be a hundred, I will never forget the laughter that came out of that paddy wagon.

My second misdemeanor was for speeding — while passing a police cruiser. As I sped by, I purposely waved to the officer and pointed to my watch, indicating that I had a dental appointment for my son and would be charged for it if we were late.

I thought it odd when he escorted me from behind with his siren and red light for three miles, but I respected him for his understanding.

In traffic court, I sobbed so uncontrollably they had to give me two aspirin and a cup of hot tea to sedate me.

Last week, I cut in front of a police car to make an illegal left turn. As the officer put on his riot helmet and a crowd began to form around my car, I knew he would not buy the fact that if I was stupid enough to cut in front of a police cruiser for an illegal turn, I surely wouldn't be smart enough to figure out the one-way streets in the downtown area.

What could I do? I got out of the car, threw myself against the hood with my feet apart, asked to hear my rights, and requested a phone call to my husband.

Now, my husband is laughing. But just wait till he finds out who gets custody of the kids!

Face facts

By Jean Adams

CHANGE: (Q.) Last summer I worked on my uncle's farm in Kansas. While I was there I met the nicest girl I've ever known. I went out with her every night I could.

I have gone back to see her three times — at Thanksgiving, Christmas, and again in February.

The first two times she was very friendly — like last summer. But the third time she wasn't. She said she didn't think she was ready to get serious with me and wanted some time to be on her own.

I agreed and told her I didn't mind if she went out with other boys when I wasn't there. She said she would write me and go out with me whenever I came back.

Since then I have found out she has gone out with at least four boys, and for six weeks has been going with one boy regularly.

Last week she wrote me that she thought there was nothing between us any more. What do you think I did wrong to get a letter like that? How can I get her back?

18 and Hurt in Michigan

(A.) There is no indication in your letter that you did a single thing wrong. You simply have run into two facts of teen-age life. Either or both may have had a part in your girl friend's change of heart.

(1) A girl, any girl, may meet a boy she likes better than the boy she is going with.

(2) Long distance romance is not enough for most teenagers. Nearness is a powerful force.

After a while, this girl may decide she prefers you to anyone else. But anything you do to crowd her into a decision will probably hurt more than it will help.

So wait a while to visit her again. While you are waiting, fill the gap with another girl, or girls. You may discover someone you like so well that a fourth trip to Kansas won't seem important.

Television is the medium in which the best movies are butchered to fit around the far more delicately treated commercials. The 90-minute movies, for instance, end right on the clock's dot; in fact, several minutes before the dot to make room for the final commercials. One network station's movie handler told us, our oath, he managed to make his late-late commuter train after midnight, when the movie being shown was longer than his suburban conductor would wait, simply by lifting out one or two entire reels of the film, always with savage injury to its continuity and credibility; but he always made his train; and never once was called on the network station's carpet to answer for the disgraceful mutilation! The viewers went to bed mystified and made; the executives slept on, but stay up for the Emmys.

Did 24 writers really have to tramp on stage to honor the Carol Burnett Show? Ego is ego, but why not just the head writer? Carol is a fine comic lady — and now 50 million viewers are convinced she can't arise and say good morning without a gagwriter.

The truly important winners of TV news awards were voted early and a phalanx of previously announced winners flown to Hollywood to stand in a row to be named best in their assorted news categories. One spoke for all. In this most important of TV categories, the winners just stood there; meanwhile 24 pieces of Carol Burnett's sense of humor trailed onstage and stopped the show just when it was going bad. Why not simply let one head writer — or Carol — explain a variety show with multiple-guest stars needs that small army to activate Carol's clowning.

And did it really take the "governors" of the TV Academy all year, all those years, to differentiate between a 26-week series and a dramatic series imported from Britain. The braided categories are no different today than early TV when Bishop Fulton J. Sheen competed for an Emmy with Milton Berle.

Now to another essential TV trauma: in that class wherein English drama competed with widely disparate domestic shows, it's pertinent to not that nothing American TV did in its then-past season compared; nothing! U.S. TV has its triumphs; we insist the Mary Tyler Moore Show is a marvelously particular-American series which can't be topped in any way; why therefore hasn't Mary Tyler Moore herself won one single Emmy over the several seasons of this recognized splendid series? As for Arch-Emmy Archie Bunker, who has walked off with a couple of seasons of Emmy Awards, did anyone there note it is an outright imitation of another English series? Shouldn't it have received an award for Best Foreign Larceny instead?

It's a scary notion — the TV "experts" who put on the annual Emmy Awards show, and the recipients of the awards as we watched them in all their tasteless dullness and cheap pretensions — are precisely the same "creative" chacters who in one way or another, day in and week out and month over month and year after year, pour their inanities into your living rooms in the most powerful medium devised in the history of communications.

Beware of fog

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If you think it's safe to continue driving during heavy fog conditions, think again. The American Automobile Association advises motoring travelers to pull as far off the road as possible when fog rolls in, move away from the vehicle and wait for the fog to lift.

Ann Landers

Ashes anxiety

Dear Ann Landers: Your advice to "Fraidy Kat" gave me the courage I needed to write about a problem that has been bothering me for a long time.

"Fraidy Kat" was a widow whose second husband carried his first wife's picture in his wallet for two years. She was afraid to look and see if it was still there. It made her very sad that he couldn't give it up. You said, "Don't look.

Simply buy him a new wallet and put your picture in it."

Three years ago I married a widower. Quite by accident I ran across his first wife's ashes in an urn, packed in a box — the same box they were shipped in by the state.

I feel uneasy about this but I've never said anything. I believe the best place for the ashes is in a cemetery. What should I do?

Dear S.W.: Inform your husband that you have come across the "box" and you feel the garage is not an appropriate place for it. Tell him that many people who request cremation ask that their ashes be strewn over a lake, or a river, or a favorite meadow. A friend of mine has requested that her ashes be put in an urn and placed in the Pump Room in Chicago — and I'm not kidding.

Dear Ann Landers: I've been married for three years to a man who never was much of a talker but I've always had the feeling the quiet fellows are the real hell-raisers. Now it appears my hunch may be right.

I just discovered what I thought was his mother's recipe box — one of those wooden, kitchen-type index files—jammed with names, addresses, telephone numbers, dimensions, and a few comments which appear to be performance ratings.

I have not told my husband I found it. Should I? He never goes anywhere without me (that I know of) and I have no reason to suspect that he is seeing anyone. But I'm baffled as to why he hangs on to the junk if he has no use for it. What should I do?

Wanda

Dear Wan: Keep your peapickin' hands off your husband's property. He probably keeps it for the same reason some women hang on to their old high school and college relics.

Dear Ann Landers: The man I'm going with is 30 years old. His father died when he was 13. His mother won't let him live his own life. The problem is sleeping pills. He eats them like candy. He is in a daze most of the time. His mother's cousin is a druggist and she gets pills for next to nothing — no prescription. He is also a big beer drinker. I've read in your column that people who take pills should not mix them with liquor because the combination could be deadly. I've clipped those columns and showed them to him. He says beer doesn't count. Is he right?

Belinda

Dear Bel: He's wrong. Beer contains alcohol and if he drinks enough beer he can get just as bombed as if he were drinking gin. Pills and beer can be a lethal combination.

Erma Bombeck

Traffic woes

My husband says I overreact to a traffic ticket. That's not true. I know a lot of women who cry for three days. And sell the car. And try to retain F. Lee Bailey to defend them.

The trouble with men is they do not have the proper respect for a traffic ticket. To them, it is a sign of manhood, like drinking a quart of beer without belching. To women, it's an emotional trauma, comparable to Hester wearing a large "A" on her chest that stands for Auto Violation.

My husband considers my traffic tickets the greatest source of humor since Milton

Berle wore a dress. As a high school graduate, I consider them a humiliation.

I have received three citations in 23 years of driving. The first one was in 1950, when I made a U-turn in front of a paddy wagon. I know what you're thinking. You're thinking I didn't see the paddy wagon. Wrong. In my mind, I humanized the police officer, rationalizing he was a man who took out the garbage, comparable to Hester wearing a large "A" on her chest that stands for Auto Violation.

If I live to be a hundred, I will never forget the laughter that came out of that paddy wagon.

My second misdemeanor was for speeding — while passing a police cruiser. As I sped by, I purposely waved to the officer and pointed to my watch, indicating that I had a dental appointment for my son and would be charged for it if we were late.

I thought it odd when he escorted me from behind with his siren and red light for three miles, but I respected him for his understanding.

In traffic court, I sobbed so uncontrollably they had to give me two aspirin and a cup of hot tea to sedate me.

Last week, I cut in front of a police car to make an illegal left turn. As the officer put on his riot helmet and a crowd began to form around my car, I knew he would not buy the fact that if I was stupid enough to cut in front of a police cruiser for an illegal turn, I surely wouldn't be smart enough to figure out the one-way streets in the downtown area.

What could I do? I got out of the car, threw myself against the hood with my feet apart, asked to hear my rights, and requested a phone call to my husband.

Now, my husband is laughing. But just wait till he finds out who gets custody of the kids!

do to crowd her into a decision will probably hurt more than it will help.

So wait a while to visit her again. While you are waiting, fill the gap with another girl, or girls. You may discover someone you like so well that a fourth trip to Kansas won't seem important.

Face facts

By Jean Adams

CHANGE: (Q.) Last summer I worked on my uncle's farm in Kansas. While I was there I met the nicest girl I've ever known. I went out with her every night I could.

I have gone back to see her three times — at Thanksgiving, Christmas, and again in February.

The first two times she was very friendly — like last summer. But the third time she wasn't. She said she didn't think she was ready to get serious with me and wanted some time to be on her own.

I agreed and told her I didn't mind if she went out with other boys when I wasn't there. She said she would write me and go out with me whenever I came back.

Since then I have found out she has gone out with at least four boys, and for six weeks has been going with one boy regularly.

Last week she wrote me that she thought there was nothing between us any more. What do you think I did wrong to get a letter like that? How can I get her back?

18 and Hurt in Michigan

(A.) There is no indication in your letter that you did a single thing wrong. You simply have run into two facts of teen-age life. Either or both may have had a part in your girl friend's change of heart.

(1) A girl, any girl, may meet a boy she likes better than the boy she is going with.

(2) Long distance romance is not enough for most teenagers. Nearness is a powerful force.

After a while, this girl may decide she prefers you to anyone else. But anything you

Opening lead — four of diamonds.

Barry Crane, of Hollywood, Calif., is probably best known to the public for his role in producing and directing the popular television shows "Mission Impossible" and "Mannix."

But in the bridge world Crane is a standout for an entirely different reason. Of the more than 16,000 life masters of the American Contract Bridge League he ranks number one, with some 14,000 master points, a position he is likely to maintain for years to come. His nearest rival has only 12,000 master points.

Here is a hand he played in the Vanderbilt team of four championship. Crane was South and got to four spades on the bidding shown. West led a diamond to his partner's ace and East returned a diamond, which South ruffed.

It is not easy to see how Crane managed to make the contract, and in fact some players would say that this was one mission really impossible — even if they saw all four hands.

But Crane accomplished the feat very effectively and without fanfare when, at trick three, he made the unnatural play of the queen of spades.

This singular thrust rendered the defense helpless. It did not matter whether East or West won the queen; in either case the defenders would score two trump tricks and a diamond, but no more.

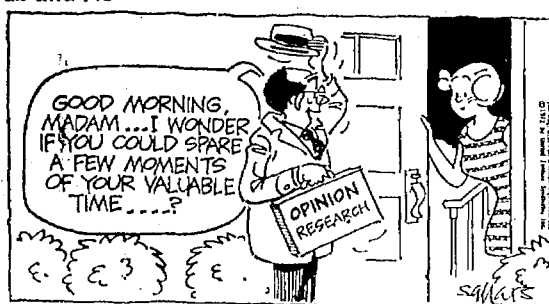

Crane based his play on the reasonable assumption that East had a doubleton honor in trumps, and his queen lead was directed specifically towards that end.

In the actual case, East took the queen with the ace and returned a club. Crane went up with the ace, led another trump, and the battle was over. He later discarded two clubs on dummy's hearts and so brought home the contract.

Opening lead — four of diamonds.
Barry Crane, of Hollywood, Calif., is probably best known to the public for his role in producing and directing the popular television shows "Mission Impossible" and "Mannix."

But in the bridge world Crane is a standout for an entirely different reason. Of the more than 16,000 life masters of the American Contract Bridge League he ranks number one, with some 14,000 master points, a position he is likely to maintain for years to come. His nearest rival has only 12,000 master points.

Here is a hand he played in the Vanderbilt team of four championship. Crane was South and got to four spades on the bidding shown. West led a diamond to his partner's ace and East returned a diamond, which South ruffed.
It is not easy to see how Crane managed to make the contract, and in fact some players would say that this was one mission really impossible — even if they saw all four hands.

But Crane accomplished the feat very effectively and without fanfare when, at trick three, he made the unnatural play of the queen of spades.
This singular thrust rendered the defense helpless. It did not matter whether East or West won the queen; in either case the defenders would score two trump tricks and a diamond, but no more.

Crane based his play on the reasonable assumption that East had a doubleton honor in trumps, and his queen lead was directed specifically towards that end.

In the actual case, East took the queen with the ace and returned a club. Crane went up with the ace, led another trump, and the battle was over. He later discarded two clubs on dummy's hearts and so brought home the contract.

Soft-spoken preacher's son: Nowhere to nomination

By United Press International

George S. McGovern is a prairie preacher's son with a war hero's medal, a passion for peace, and — until a few weeks ago — no chance at all to win the Democratic presidential nomination.

The soft-spoken South Dakota senator came from nowhere to put together what he calls a "new coalition" of young people, well-to-do suburbanites, and intellectuals, now bolstered by growing numbers of the traditionally Democratic blue collar workers, blacks and other ethnic minorities.

When Iowa's handsome Sen. Harold Hughes dropped out of the Democratic presidential lists early last spring, he was asked how he felt about a McGovern candidacy. His response was a sigh: "If only we could do something about his hair and his voice."

The hair is a medium brown and very thin. McGovern lets it grow long enough on the sides to comb across the balding dome. The voice is nondescript with a flat midwestern accent devoid of oratorical flourishes. When he graduated from high school, the line under his picture in the yearbook read, "As a debater he's a nice kid."

Lacking the "charisma" which politicians are supposed to need, McGovern of necessity ran an issue-oriented campaign and began to build an army of mostly youthful, all-volunteer workers that became the envy, the despair, and finally the ruin of McGovern's better-known presidential rivals.

When McGovern was a first grader, his teacher thought he couldn't read. He just sat in the classroom with his mouth closed, staring down at the floor with those unfathomable blue eyes. It took a year — and a perceptive second grade teacher — to discover that he was not dull, just shy.

Call out for sympathy

2 views of heroin addict

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—The man searches for a spot on his body that isn't welled or infected by unsanitary needles. He finds a vein on his foot and slides the needle under his skin.

For a few hours, at least, the victim knows he has postponed the agony of heroin withdrawal.

Another man takes about 30 minutes from his drafting job and enters a clean men's room. Openly he heats his heroin to liquify it, then gives himself an injection.

He goes back to his drafting job knowing that he too, has postponed temporarily his hell on earth.

The first man is in the United States. He may be dead by the time his story is told. The other man is in England, and a doctor here feels he has a chance at living a normal life.

Dr. Walter R. Cuskey, an assistant professor at the University of Pennsylvania's Medical School, feels it is time the United States begins to look upon heroin addicts with more sympathy.

Cuskey is a co-author of "Drug Trip Abroad," a book that chronicles the experiences of heroin addicts participating in England's "heroin maintenance" program.

"Heroin maintenance works in England because it is done both medically and sympathetically," Dr. Cuskey said. "An addict there can live a normal, useful life."

In the United States, the heroin addict experiences a string of drug arrests, overdoses, and frightening withdrawals because "we look upon addicts as legal, rather than medical problems," according to Cuskey.

Cuskey discounts the "cold turkey" system of withdrawal. In a study completed in the mid 60's of such a program at Fort Worth Hospital, he said: "The rate of relapse for females in that program was 40 to 60 per cent. Another study later showed the rate up to 60 per cent."

He said that in "therapeutic communities," where addicts undergo a controlled cold turkey withdrawal, the success rate is only five per cent.

He said the heroin addict in the United States is a "slave to two masters—the narcotic and the law."

But in England, heroin can be purchased legally after the addict registers with the government. Since the addict is buying his "fix" from the government, he doesn't have to associate with the criminal element.

Cuskey thinks a heroin maintenance program, along with methadone and therapy measures, would probably go a long way in helping America's addicts.

"How can you expect a heroin addict to get a good job when they're laying off engineers at Lockheed?" he said. "When you talk about social rehabilitation, you have to talk jobs."

In England, according to Cuskey, addicts hold jobs. Some are married and supporting families. While they are viewed with suspicion by English society, Cuskey said addicts are treated "with far more sympathy than in the United States."

Bishop assigned to area

READING — United Methodist Churches in Monroe County and adjoining areas in Pennsylvania were assigned a new bishop recently in ceremonies held at Reading.

Dr. James M. Ault, Madison, N.J., was consecrated a bishop and assigned to the Philadelphia area. His responsibility includes eastern Pennsylvania, Puerto Rico, and Wyoming Conferences.

Bishop Ault, 54, is a graduate of Colgate University and Union Theological Seminary. He was first ordained in the Wyoming Conference in 1950, and served churches in Preston, N.Y., East Rutherford and Leonia, N.J., and Pittsfield, Mass.

After teaching practical theology at Union Seminary from 1961 to 1968, he was made Dean of Drew Theological Seminary, the position from which he was elected by the delegates to the Northeastern Jurisdictional Conference, along with three other new bishops.

Bishop Ault and his wife, the former Dorothy Barnhart, of Bethlehem, will soon move to the Philadelphia area. The bishop's first activity will be a tour of the flood-ravaged communities of the Wilkes-Barre area.

Students receive degrees

County elementary enrollment up

Record Harrisburg Bureau HARRISBURG — Enrollment in Pennsylvania's public elementary schools declined for the second time in ten years during the 1971-72 school year, according to the state Department of Education.

But an increase was noted in the case of Monroe County's public elementary schools.

The increase in county elementary enrollment wasn't great, from 5,767 during the 1970-71 school year to 5,899 the past school year. On the elementary level, the ten-year pattern in the county has been: 1961-62, 4,585; 1962-63, 4,893; 1963-64, 5,146; 1964-65, 4,819; 1965-66, 4,953; 1966-67, 5,089; 1967-68, 5,201; 1968-69, 5,648; and 1969-70, 5,817.

According to the department, the grade placement scheduled for the Monroe County elementary pupils was: kindergarten, 792; first grade, 871; second grade, 818; third grade, 762; fourth grade, 803; fifth grade, 840; sixth grade, 828; and those classified as exceptional, 185. Pike County's elementary enrollment climbed from 870 during the 1970-71 school year to 910 the past school year, with the past ten-year pattern as follows: 1961-62, 654; 1962-63, 679; 1963-64, 775; 1964-65, 706; 1965-66, 825; 1966-67, 801; 1967-68, 838; 1968-69, 843; and 1969-70, 874.

Of the 910 pupils there were 111 enrolled in kindergarten; first grade, 116; second grade, 135; third grade, 123; fourth grade, 153; fifth grade, 132; sixth grade, 133; and those classified as exceptional, seven.

County elementary enrollment up

Record Harrisburg Bureau
HARRISBURG — Enrollment in Pennsylvania's public elementary schools declined for the second time in ten years during the 1971-72 school year, according to the state Department of Education.

But an increase was noted in the case of Monroe County's public elementary schools.

The increase in county elementary enrollment wasn't great, from 5,767 during the 1970-71 school year to 5,899 the past school year. On the elementary level, the ten-year pattern in the county has been: 1961-62, 4,585; 1962-63, 4,893; 1963-64, 5,146; 1964-65, 4,819; 1965-66, 4,953; 1966-67, 5,089; 1967-68, 5,201; 1968-69, 5,648; and 1969-70, 5,817.

According to the department, the grade placement scheduled for the Monroe County elementary pupils was: kindergarten, 792; first grade, 871; second grade, 818; third grade, 762; fourth grade, 803; fifth grade, 840; sixth grade, 828; and those classified as exceptional, 185. Pike County's elementary enrollment climbed from 870 during the 1970-71 school year to 910 the past school year, with the past ten-year pattern as follows: 1961-62, 654; 1962-63, 679; 1963-64, 775; 1964-65, 706; 1965-66, 825; 1966-67, 801; 1967-68, 838; 1968-69, 843; and 1969-70, 874.

Of the 910 pupils there were 111 enrolled in kindergarten; first grade, 116; second grade, 135; third grade, 123; fourth grade, 153; fifth grade, 132; sixth grade, 133; and those classified as exceptional, seven.

Write to know

The people in The Pocono Record circulation area have a "Write to Know" — and The Record will try to provide the answers in the "Write to Know" column. The column, designed to answer any questions or solve any problems (consumer, government or anything else) will appear every Monday on the first page of the second section. Send all questions to "Write to Know," The Pocono Record, 511 Lenox St., Stroudsburg, Pa. 18360. Questions should be in writing and signed. No telephone calls, please.

Q. — December 2, 1971, I mailed a Christmas gift order to Alaska Sleeping Bag Co., 13150 S.W. Dawson Way, Beaverton, Oregon, 97005, for the sum of $79.90; money order no. 128510 from Monroe Security Bank. It was several weeks and I didn't hear a thing. I wrote them so they sent some of the order and said I'd get the rest in eight weeks. I wrote several times. The last time I wrote certified mail, no. 875771 and still no reply. What could I do to get my $25.90 back?

M.H., Stroudsburg

A. — You can contact the Beaverton Chamber of Commerce or wait until you receive a court notice saying the Alaska Sleeping Bag Company went bankrupt two weeks ago. That's exactly what happened, according to the Beaverton Chamber of Commerce. With as many customers as the company had when it went down the drain, notices are slow getting to purchasers. Arrangements to refund money are now in the hands of the law. Beaverton's Chamber of Commerce can be reached by dialing 1-503-644-0123. If problems arise in getting through, ask your operator for assistance. Don't bother with the company's listed number. It is now a recording.

Q. — On February 6, The New York Times ran an ad for a Company called World of Cheese. Membership in the club for a year was five dollars. If the member acted before March 15, he would be sent five mystery cheeses, a hardwood cheese board and a cheese knife. I sent my check for five dollars and heard nothing. My canceled check appeared with others in my bank statement. I wrote World of Cheese and got back a very questionable explanation that former employees had absconded with orders and mailing lists, but in due time, all would be straightened out. About six months later nothing has been done, except that in April I got an opportunity to buy some cheese to help them get on their feet. I wrote that I would buy nothing until the original agreement had been fulfilled.

Mrs. M.M., East Stroudsburg

A. — The address you gave in Elmsfield, N.Y., is no longer the company's address. They have been absorbed into a larger firm in Yonkers, N.Y. Police in Greenburg, N.Y., report many persons are currently seeking the cheese company, but the company is no longer in their jurisdiction. The officer we spoke to said the new company has all the records of the former unit and will make good on numerous complaints in due time. It sounds as if you have spent "due time" already so we suggest you trace the company through the New York Attorney General's Office. The name of the old company should be sufficient for a trace. If it isn't, try the Greenburg Police at 1-914-WH9-7700. They should be able to get the new company's name and address after some deep file digging.

Q. — Last June 6th I made a bad mistake and paid the state personal income tax for the entire year — $1,000 — when the tax was declared illegal. I expected my money would be refunded. To date I have received nothing. I am wondering if they ever intend to refund the money and if you have any idea on how I should go about trying to get it back.

H.H.F., Stroudsburg

A. — A new state income tax was passed soon after the first income tax was declared illegal in 1971. The new tax became effective June 1, 1971, and turned out to be more than the original tax that was passed. The illegal tax was five per cent of federal taxable income, while the new tax included no deductions and was 2.3 per cent of gross income. The thousand dollars you paid to the state was probably applied to the new tax.

Q. — Is there a reputable day camp in the area that makes provisions for five-year-olds, and could you provide me with any information about the "Fresh Air" program giving a city child a week or two summer vacation in a rural home?

N.L., Pocono Summit

A. — In Barrett YMCA in Mountainhome provides a day camp for five year olds from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. daily. Swimming is offered from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. at the Stroudsburg YMCA, and a trip is scheduled for one day each week.

The nearest local chairwomen for the "Fresh Air Program" are Mrs. Albert Hendricks of 39 Orange Street, Port Jervis, N.Y. Telephone — 914-856-6054. She will be organizing a group of city children to have a vacation for the week of August 10. Mrs. Leonard Ziegfried of Bethlehem R.D. 1 will also organize a summer program. Phone — 215-759-1844, or 868-1461, ext. 341.

In reply to a question in last week's column concerning an income tax deduction for crossing a toll bridge, The Pocono Record has revealed additional information necessitating a correction:

A person cannot deduct from his income tax the expenses for crossing a toll bridge if he lives away from his job or business at his own convenience and is a daily commuter. However, if a businessman or employee has a main job in one area and his occupation requires him to travel to another area, he is able to deduct commuting expenses.

Gimme two!

As auctioneer Carl Yost beckoned for funds for Monroe County coffers Saturday, the shade of a spreading maple tree battled for an equal number of buyers. The county netted $1,261 in the event, selling a vast collection of curios to the curious.

Pocono Record Reporter

SNYDERSVILLE — The incessant "you-bought-it" snap of an auctioneer registered $1,261 in the county's general fund Saturday as crusty and curious items were driven from dusty attics and cellars to the auction block.

All told, about 300 persons came to bid at Pleasant Valley Manor in the hazy, hot and humid five and one-half hour sale, but no more than 100 were on hand at any one time. And during the outdoor session, most crowded under the spreading shade of a giant maple.

It was the first such auction in recent memory and the aging curios put up for sale reflected the decades of haphazard collection.

The last wagon wheel owned by the county of Monroe drew seven dollars. It was a very fine wagon wheel. "The best I have ever seen at an auction," said Carl Yost atop a heavy wooden table with a microphone strapped around his neck. "Some you see are terribly rotted out."

"Who will give me the first dollar and quick . . . I have a dollar who will go a half . . . One and a half I got. Will anybody go two . . ." boomed Yost, pointing authoritatively to a squinting reticent with his arms folded. A nod and Yost had two dollars. Back to the bidder across the parking lot and a threat to sell at two if another half dollar wasn't put up.

or cabinet would jack the price into double figures with two bidders ready to place the item in their den or play room at any cost.

"All items are sold as is. You can return an item within the next five sales if it is not as represented," warned the auctioneer. "Let the buyer beware."

"Every dollar we raise is a dollar cut from your taxes next year. Who will donate a dollar to the county?"

On some things the crowd just wouldn't budge. Curtain stretchers are at a low ebb on the auction circuit these days, and Yost couldn't convince anyone a neatly wrapped set was just the thing for a modern home no matter how hard he joked and cajoled.

"All these things you people foolishly didn't bid on . . . we're going to give you a chance at later on," he quipped.

After an hour in the sun, Yost allowed his relief, Jake Werkheiser, to hop aboard the stand for a crack at the hustle.

"Here are some fine recessed picture frames. Who will give me the first half dollar for these?" He held up a sparkling bed pan. "Look, here is a dipper that goes with them."

"Here's a thing that's hard to get when you need it and when you need it, you need it fast. Here's your chance." Out came a wooden wheel chair.

It sold. So did two modern metal versions of the same device.

Sixty-one Bentwood chairs were a contested item. High bidder took as many as he wanted for the first bid. Fearing a mass grab by a club or restaurant owner, the first bid took 12 chairs at five dollars each. Second bidder took eight at $3.50.

It whittled down from there, and the fourth bidder went home with 12 chairs at a dollar apiece.

On to the machinery at 4 p.m. A jungle of gears and engine, called a garden tractor, drew $75. "Stole . . . I mean sold," Werkheiser joked. Bidding on a power mower was helped by a pretty blond who scratched her shoulder at $11 and then looked horrified at the prospect of having to carry home an $11 grass chopper on her motor-bike.

Werkheiser picked up her consternation and rasped an extra few minutes to pinch out another bid. Finally, on the third call for a $12 bid, a tanned young man saved the damsel with a lift of his forefinger.

It opened a renewed burst of bidding, however brief. Perhaps the crowd thought the young man saw a mechanical future in the mower, trusting his judgment over the blond's.

Whatever the reason, he paid out $14 before he was allowed to drag the creaking mower from the field.

Flood residents offered temporary recovery jobs

WILKES-BARRE — Thousands of residents in this area who lost their jobs due to tropical storm Agnes may be employed in temporary recovery programs, Labor Secretary James D. Hodgson reported Sunday.

The Labor Department plans to provide an extra $28.5 million to hire 40,000 persons for temporary work.

"Special efforts are being made to speed and insure full unemployment compensation coverage for workers who have lost their jobs as a result of massive flooding that swept through the East last month," Hodgson said.

The Labor secretary said the special funds were being taken from existing appropriations and would be made available immediately. The Labor Department last week allocated an additional $1.5 million to pay for hiring of more than 2,000 unemployed youths and adults for recovery projects in the disaster areas.

President Nixon asked Congress last Wednesday to appropriate $1.7 billion for emergency relief. If approved, it would be the largest allocation of its kind.

Hodgson said a total of 103,160 claims for disaster unemployment compensation or unemployment insurance benefits linked to the storm had been received to date from five states — New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, and Florida.

"This far exceeds earlier estimates," he said, and did not even include information from West Virginia and the District of Columbia, which also suffered widespread damages. Should the present volume of unemployment claims continue for the next 10 days, the final figure might exceed 150,000.

The $28.5 million in new aid will be used to finance two special relief efforts. One, to be called Special Program of Emergency Employment Development (SPEED), will cost $8.5 million and permit hiring of up to 20,000 jobless persons for "clean-up projects."

The remaining money will be made available to the affected state and local governments to hire another 20,000 workers for related public service jobs lasting about eight weeks.

"This action is being taken in accordance with President Nixon's orders to relieve suffering in the flood-stricken areas as swiftly as possible," Hodgson said.

Chess master recalls duels with cantankerous Fischer

By BRUCE POSTEN
Pocono Record Reporter

CANADENSIS — Arthur Feuerstein, a 36-year-old Brooklyn native, had the distinct honor of playing and beating United States Chess Champion Bobby Fischer in the U.S. Junior Chess Championship in 1956.

Feuerstein, vacationing at Spruce Hill Farms in Canadensis, has known Fischer since his early high school days and has played in several tournaments with the temperamental professional.

"The last time I played Fischer," said Feuerstein, a national grand master in chess, "was either in 1970 or 1971, when we competed in a speed chess tournament. Fischer won 21 games out of a possible 22 and was well on his way to national and international fame."

Feuerstein described Fischer as a "chess player in a class by himself." He noted of the half-dozen full time professional chess players in the United States, none of them could come close to approaching Fischer's excellence.

He acknowledged Fischer was rather irksome, but said as a youth he was never really self-assertive.

"I remember when Bobby first began playing chess. He always played the defensive and was very cautious. Today, he only plays a very aggressive and offensive game. As a matter of fact, so far in the tournament between Fischer and Boris Spassky, Fischer has been taking all the risks and Spassky is playing a conservative game," he said.

Feuerstein said most of the people he knows are hoping Spassky will win because of Fischer's behavior.

Arthur Feuerstein

"I believe Fischer never developed a personality beyond the level of a 15-year-old and many of his individual quirks and tantrums are not necessary," he said.

He specifically dismissed Fischer's annoyance with the presence of cameras in the chess room by saying "professional chess players are trained to have absolute concentration and very seldom give away their emotions through facial expressions."

He added Fischer was always bothered by noises when playing chess and once even asked for the removal of the audience.

"Many chess players in the Soviet Union and the United States have other jobs besides chess, but for Bobby Fischer, chess is his entire life."

"Although he has a high IQ of 130 or 140, he dropped out of high school because of boredom and became the U.S. Chess Champion at age 14," he said.

Feuerstein explained the tournament between Fischer and Spassky is a 24-game match with challenger Fischer having to earn 12½ points in order to dethrone champion Spassky.

"A point is given for each game won and a half point is awarded to each player in case of a tie. Spassky will be able to retain the championship if he can keep Fischer from winning more than 12 points," he explained.

Feuerstein characterized Spassky as a versatile chess player who can be both innovative and cautious.

He noted Spassky's second, Efim Geller, who advises the champ before games, is an extremely aggressive player along the lines of Fischer. However, he pointed out "Spassky's playing does not reflect any aggressive moves as of yet."

Fischer, at first refusing to have a second, finally accepted Father William Lombardy, who was considered to have even more potential than Fischer ten years ago.

"Lombardy is also a versatile player like Spassky; quite adept at playing both offense and defense," he said.

Feuerstein hopes Bobby wins the tournament and praises him for the contributions he has made to the promotion of chess in the United States.

"He has brought the purse for chess up to $200,000 equal to that of golf, and aroused people's interest in the game," he said.

He noted if Fischer wins the tournament such companies as Coca-Cola and IBM, who sponsor foreign chess tournaments, would be more likely to sponsor tournaments in the United States to help beginning U.S. players.

"After all," Feuerstein remarked, "Bobby admitted he was playing more for the sake of U.S. prestige than for the money, and with his will to win I hope he makes it."

Lauded for service

Maj. Rex Worthy of the Salvation Army, left, chats with "Bucky" Jones, feted Saturday night by the Optimist Club of the Stroudsburgs. Jones received this year's community service award.

C. Alton Jones (who?) gets Optimist Service Award

ECHO LAKE — Who's C. Alton Jones and why did they say those things about him?

That's a question more than a few members of the Optimist Club of the Stroudsburgs asked themselves Saturday night. Then they found out it was "Bucky" Jones.

Major Rex Worthy, commanding officer of the East

Stroudsburg Salvation Army Citadel, praised Jones for his "beggars tactics" and "behind the lines" work in aiding the underprivileged families of the area.

Jones, a Marshalls Creek resident, is relocation and rehabilitation director for the Monroe County Redevelopment Authority. In his spare time, he gathers household goods and furnishings, such as furniture and appliances, that may be reusable by needy families.

He has also established a favorable social relationship with these families, helping them to live better lives.

"This community would be far poorer if it weren't for Bucky," Maj. Worthy said. "It's costly, time consuming, unglamorous work, but he does it."

Jones, overwhelmed by the response by Optimist Club members, refused to take all of the credit. He said he wanted to share the compliments with those persons who have donated items and assisted him.

Jones especially cited the volunteer service of the Church Women United who coordinate the need of the disadvantaged families with him.

Motorists escape injuries

TANNERSVILLE — Two persons escaped injury Sunday afternoon when their autos collided on Interstate Route 80 about one mile west of Tannersville.

Pennsylvania State Police from the Mount Pocono Troop 5 barracks said a truck towing a mobile home to the flood stricken Wilkes-Barre area and a car operated by David Parry of Scranton collided on the wet highway while passing.

A police spokesman said Parry attempted to pass the truck, driven by Henry

Greene, of Lake Hopatcong, N.J., but skidded into the side of the trailer. Parry's auto then spun out of control and ran down an embankment on the left side of the road.

Greene's truck was also thrown out of control and rolled onto its side near the right lane. Neither driver was injured but damage to both vehicles and the mobile home was estimated at $3,200.

The I-80 troopers also investigated another traffic mishap at the junction of Rte.'s 80 and 81E in the eastbound lanes but detailed information was not yet available late Sunday night. Minor injuries were reported from that incident.

In East Stroudsburg, a six-year-old girl was struck by a car on Lackawanna Avenue and is reported in satisfactory condition at the General Hospital of Monroe County suffering from a broken leg.

East Stroudsburg Police said Angel Martin darted out into the path of a car operated by Frank Renaldi, also of East Stroudsburg. The little girl was carried approximately 40 feet by the car.

The new tax became effective June 1, 1971, and turned out to be more than the original tax that was passed. The illegal tax was five per cent of federal taxable income, while the new tax included no deductions and was 2.3 per cent of gross income. The thousand dollars you paid to the state was probably applied to the new tax.

Q. — Is there a reputable day camp in the area that makes provisions for five-year-olds, and could you provide me with any information about the "Fresh Air" program giving a city child a week or two summer vacation in a rural home?

N.L., Pocono Summit

A. — In Barrett YMCA in Mountainhome provides a day camp for five year olds from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. daily. Swimming is offered from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. at the Stroudsburg YMCA, and a trip is scheduled for one day each week.

The nearest local chairwomen for the "Fresh Air Program" are Mrs. Albert Hendricks of 39 Orange Street, Port Jervis, N.Y. Telephone — 914-856-6054. She will be organizing a group of city children to have a vacation for the week of August 10. Mrs. Leonard Ziegfried of Bethlehem R.D. 1 will also organize a summer program. Phone — 215-759-1844, or 868-1461, ext.-341.

In reply to a question in last week's column concerning an income tax deduction for crossing a toll bridge, The Pocono Record has revealed additional information necessitating a correction:

A person cannot deduct from his income tax the expenses for crossing a toll bridge if he lives away from his job or business at his own convenience and is a daily commuter. However, if a businessman or employee has a main job in one area and his occupation requires him to travel to another area, he is able to deduct commuting expenses.

County $1,261 richer — and rid of curios

Gimme two!

As auctioneer Carl Yost beckoned for funds for Monroe County coffers Saturday, the shade of a spreading maple tree battled for an equal number of buyers. The county netted $1,261 in the event, selling a vast collection of curios to the curious. (Photo by George Arnold)

By GARY GROSSMAN

Pocono Record Reporter
SNYDERSVILLE — The incessant "you-bought-it" snap of an auctioneer registered $1,261 in the county's general fund Saturday as crusty and curious items were driven from dusty attics and cellars to the auction block.

All tolled, about 300 persons came to bid at Pleasant Valley Manor in the hazy, hot and humid five and one-half hour sale, but no more than 100 were on hand at any one time. And during the outdoor session, most crowded under the spreading shade of a giant maple.

It was the first such auction in recent memory and the aging curios put up for sale reflected the decades of haphazard collection.

The last wagon wheel owned by the county of Monroe drew seven dollars. It was a very fine wagon wheel. "The best I have ever seen at an auction," said Carl Yost atop a heavy wooden table with a microphone strapped around his neck. "Some you see are terribly rotted out."

"Who will give me the first dollar and quick . . . I have a dollar who will go a half . . . One and a half I got. Will anybody go two . . ." boomed Yost, pointing authoritatively to a squinting reticent with his arms folded. A nod and Yost had two dollars. Back to the bidder across the parking lot and a threat to sell at two if another half dollar wasn't put up.

And so it went. Sometimes a one-on-one battle for a table

or cabinet would jack the price into double figures with two bidders ready to place the item in their den or play room at any cost.

"All items are sold as is. You can return an item within the next five sales if it is not as represented," warned the auctioneer. "Let the buyer beware."

"Every dollar we raise is a dollar cut from your taxes next year. Who will donate a dollar to the county?"

On some things the crowd just wouldn't budge. Curtain stretchers are at a low ebb on the auction circuit these days, and Yost couldn't convince anyone a neatly wrapped set was just the thing for a modern home no matter how hard he joked and cajoled.

"All these things you people foolishly didn't bid on . . . we're going to give you a chance at later on," he quipped.

After an hour in the sun, Yost allowed his relief, Jake Werkheiser, to hop aboard the stand for a crack at the hustle.

"Here are some fine recessed picture frames. Who will give me the first half dollar for these?" He held up a sparkling bed pan. "Look, here is a dipper that goes with them."

From inside the manor a dollar bid filtered through the window and no competition stalled a prompt sale.

"Here's a thing that's hard to get when you need it and when you need it, you need it fast. Here's your chance." Out came a wooden wheel chair.

"Even if you never use it, it's money well invested. Maybe a friend will need it."

It sold. So did two modern metal versions of the same device.

Sixty-one Bentwood chairs were a contested item. High bidder took as many as he wanted for the first bid. Fearing a mass grab by a club or restaurant owner, the first bid took 12 chairs at five dollars each. Second bidder took eight at $3.50.

It whittled down from there, and the fourth bidder went home with 12 chairs at a dollar apiece.

On to the machinery at 4 p.m. A jungle of gears and engine, called a garden tractor, drew $75. "Stole . . . I mean sold," Werkheiser joked.

Bidding on a power mower was helped by a pretty blond who scratched her shoulder at $11 and then looked horrified at the prospect of having to carry home an $11 grass chopper on her motor-bike.

Werkheiser picked up her consternation and rasped an extra few minutes to pinch out another bid. Finally, on the third call for a $12 bid, a tanned young man saved the damsel with a lift of his forefinger.

It opened a renewed burst of bidding, however brief. Perhaps the crowd thought the young man saw a mechanical future in the mower, trusting his judgment over the blond's.

Whatever the reason, he paid out $14 before he was allowed to drag the creaking mower from the field.

Flood residents offered temporary recovery jobs

WILKES-BARRE — Thousands of residents in this area who lost their jobs due to tropical storm Agnes may be employed in temporary recovery projects in the disaster areas.

President Nixon asked Congress last Wednesday to appropriate $1.7 billion for emergency relief. If approved, it would be the largest allocation of its kind.

Hodgson said a total of 103,160 claims for disaster unemployment compensation or unemployment insurance benefits linked to the storm had been received to date from five states — New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, and Florida.

"This far exceeds earlier estimates," he said, and did not even include information from West Virginia and the District of Columbia, which also suffered widespread damages. Should the present

$1.5 million to pay for hiring of more than 2,000 unemployed youths and adults for recovery projects in the disaster areas.

The Labor Department plans to provide an extra $28.5 million to hire 40,000 persons for temporary work.

"Special efforts are being made to speed and insure full unemployment compensation coverage for workers who have lost their jobs as a result of massive flooding that swept through the East last month," Hodgson said.

The Labor secretary said the special funds were being taken from existing appropriations and would be made available immediately. The Labor Department last week allocated an additional volume of unemployment claims continue for the next 10 days, the final figure might exceed 150,000.

The $28.5 million in new aid will be used to finance two special relief efforts. One, to be called Special Program of Emergency Employment Development (SPEED), will cost $8.5 million and permit hiring of up to 20,000 jobless persons for "clean-up projects."

The remaining money will be made available to the affected state and local governments to hire another 20,000 workers for related public service jobs lasting about eight weeks.

"This action is being taken in accordance with President Nixon's orders to relieve suffering in the flood-stricken areas as swiftly as possible," Hodgson said.

Chess master recalls duels with cantankerous Fischer

By BRUCE POSTEN

Pocono Record Reporter

CANADENSIS — Arthur Feuerstein, a 36-year-old Brooklyn native, had the distinct honor of playing and beating United States Chess Champion Bobby Fischer in the U.S. Junior Chess Championship in 1956.

Feuerstein, vacationing at Spruce Hill Farms in Canadensis, has known Fischer since his early high school days and has played in several tournaments with the temperamental professional.

"The last time I played Fischer," said Feuerstein, a national grand master in chess, "was either in 1970 or 1971, when we competed in a speed chess tournament. Fischer won 21 games out of a possible 22 and was well on his way to national and international fame."

Feuerstein described Fischer as a "chess player in a class by himself." He noted of the half-dozen full time professional chess players in the United States, none of them could come close to approaching Fischer's excellence.

He acknowledged Fischer was rather irksome, but said as a youth he was never really self-assertive.

"I remember when Bobby first began playing chess. He always played the defensive and was very cautious. Today, he only plays a very aggressive and offensive game. As a matter of fact, so far in the tournament between Fischer and Boris Spassky, Fischer has been taking all the risks and Spassky is playing a conservative game," he said.

Feuerstein said most of the people he knows are hoping Spassky will win because of Fischer's behavior.

Arthur Feuerstein

"I believe Fischer never developed a personality beyond the level of a 15-year-old and many of his individual quirks and tantrums are not necessary," he said.

He specifically dismissed Fischer's annoyance with the presence of cameras in the chess room by saying "professional chess players are trained to have absolute concentration and very seldom give away their emotions through facial expressions."

He added Fischer was always bothered by noises when playing chess and once even asked for the removal of the audience.

"Many chess players in the Soviet Union and the United States have other jobs besides chess, but for Bobby Fischer, chess is his entire life."

"Although he has a high IQ of 130 or 140, he dropped out of high school because of boredom and became the U.S. Chess Champion at age 14," he said.

Feuerstein explained the tournament between Fischer and Spassky is a 24-game match with challenger Fischer having to earn 12½ points in order to dethrone champion Spassky.

"A point is given for each game won and a half point is awarded to each player in case of a tie. Spassky will be able to retain the championship if he can keep Fischer from winning more than 12 points," he explained.

Feuerstein characterized Spassky as a versatile chess player who can be both innovative and cautious.

He noted Spassky's second, Ewim Geller, who advises the champ before games, is an extremely aggressive player along the lines of Fischer. However, he pointed out "Spassky's playing does not reflect any aggressive moves as of yet."

Fischer, at first refusing to have a second, finally accepted Father William Lombardy, who was considered to have even more potential than Fischer ten years ago.

"Lombardy is also a versatile player like Spassky; quite adept at playing both offense and defense," he said.

Feuerstein hopes Bobby wins the tournament and praises him for the contributions he has made to the promotion of chess in the United States.

"He has brought the purse for chess up to $200,000 equal to that of golf, and aroused people's interest in the game," he said.

He noted if Fischer wins the tournament such companies as Coca-Cola and IBM, who sponsor foreign chess tournaments, would be more likely to sponsor tournaments in the United States to help beginning U.S. players.

"After all," Feuerstein remarked, "Bobby admitted he was playing more for the sake of U.S. prestige than for the money, and with his will to win I hope he makes it."

Lauded for service

Maj. Rex Worthy of the Salvation Army, left, chats with "Bucky" Jones, feted Saturday night by the Optimist Club of the Stroudsburgs. Jones received this year's community service award.

C. Alton Jones (who?) gets Optimist Service Award

ECHO LAKE — Who's C. Alton Jones and why did they say those things about him?

That's a question more than a few members of the Optimist Club of the Stroudsburgs asked themselves Saturday night. Then they found out it was "Bucky" Jones.

Jones was honored by club members who presented him with this year's community service award. Approximately 80 people attended the banquet held at Heddy's Steak House, Echo Lake.

Major Rex Worthy, commanding officer of the East

Stroudsburg Salvation Army Citadel, praised Jones for his "beggar tactics" and "behind the lines" work in aiding the underprivileged families of the area.

Jones, a Marshalls Creek resident, is relocation and rehabilitation director for the Monroe County Redevelopment Authority. In his spare time, he gathers household goods and furnishings, such as furniture and appliances, that may be reusable by needy families.

He has also established a favorable social relationship with these families, helping them to live better lives.

"This community would be far poorer if it weren't for Bucky," Maj. Worthy said. "It's costly, time consuming, unglamorous work, but he does it."

Jones, overwhelmed by the response by Optimist Club members, refused to take all of the credit. He said he wanted to share the compliments with those persons who have donated items and assisted him.

Jones especially cited the volunteer service of the Church Women United who coordinate the need of the disadvantaged families with him.

Motorists escape injuries

TANNERSVILLE — Two persons escaped injury Sunday afternoon when their autos collided on Interstate Route 80 about one mile west of Tannersville.

Pennsylvania State Police from the Mount Pocono Troop S barracks said a truck towing a mobile home to the flood stricken Wilkes-Barre area and a car operated by David Parry of Scranton collided on the wet highway while passing.

A police spokesman said Parry attempted to pass the truck, driven by Henry

Greene, of Lake Hopatcong, N.J., but skidded into the side of the trailer. Parry's auto then spun out of control and ran down an embankment on the left side of the road.

Greene's truck was also thrown out of control and rolled onto its side near the right lane. Neither driver was injured but damage to both vehicles and the mobile home was estimated at $3,200.

The I-80 troopers also investigated another traffic mishap at the junction of Rte.'s 80 and 81E in the eastbound lanes but detailed information was not yet available late Sunday night. Minor injuries were reported from that incident.

In East Stroudsburg, a six-year-old girl was struck by a car on Lackawanna Avenue and is reported in satisfactory condition at the General Hospital of Monroe County suffering from a broken leg.

East Stroudsburg Police said Angel Martin darted out into the path of a car operated by Frank Renaldi, also of East Stroudsburg. The little girl was carried approximately 40 feet by the car.

Bettenhausen injury mars Leonard's win

CAMBRIDGE JUNCTION, Mich. (UPI)—Joe Leonard of Hermosa Beach, Calif., took the lead from faltering Mel Kenyon of Lebanon, Ind., on the next to last lap Sunday to win the Michigan 200 for U.S. Auto Club championship cars at Michigan International Speedway.

The race was marred as Merle Bettenhausen of Tinley Park, Ill., driving his first championship race, was seriously injured in a flaming crash on the back stretch in the second lap.

Bettenhausen was listed in "critical, but stable condition" at the University of Michigan burn center in Ann Arbor. He lost his right arm near the shoulder and suffered third degree burns as the car slammed into the wall coming off the second turn and hugged the fence down the back chute.

The second half of the twin 200 races—a 200-miler for stock cars—began immediately after the end of the championship 200 but was halted in the 16th lap when it began raining.

Kenyon was the only contender to take the one mandatory pit stop under the yellow light midway in the race and didn't lose ground. He took the lead on the 80th lap when Mario Andretti of Nazareth, Pa., retired with mechanical problems.

But fate denied Kenyon, a three-time midwest champion, his first Indy-type victory as he ran out of fuel in the backstretch of the 98th lap.

For Leonard, driving for the Parnelli Jones "superteam," it was his first victory of the year and also the team's first.

The defending national champion averaged 140.685 miles per hour for the 200-mile distance.

Bobby Unser of Albuquerque, N.M., who set a world qualifying record for a closed course Saturday when he guided his Eagle around the oval at 199.778 m.p.h., dropped out of the race while leading in the 63rd lap.

Bettenhausen's brother, Gary, who was among the leaders in the first two laps, withdrew from the race to accompany his brother to the hospital.

Leonard now takes over the USAC point lead for 1972. He had been tied with Mark Donohue of Media, Pa., going into the race, but Donohue was unable to compete because of a knee injury suffered in a Can-Am testing accident.

Bangor wins area crown with two runs in sixth

BY CHUCK FIERSON

Record Sports Editor

EAST STROUDSBURG — Rich Stinson scored with the winning run Sunday when he threw to the plate to try to get him late and Bangor took a 7-6 victory over Slate Belt for the District 20 North Area Little League title.

Bangor will face East Area champion Northeast at 6 p.m. Thursday. It moved into the final with an 11-2 win over Pocono North Saturday.

Trailing, 6-5, going into the last of the sixth, Steve Raph led off with a pinch-hit single and went to second on Stinson's double. Pinch-runner Tom Baker scored on Brad Pensyl's single with none out to tie the score.

Lee Miller, who started for Bangor, but was lifted in the fourth inning, then hit a grounder to Gary Miller at second. But Miller's throw to catcher Lou Goffredo was late and Stinson came across with the winning run.

Slate Belt took a 1-0 lead in the second inning, but the winner tied it when Stinson hit a sacrifice fly in the bottom of the second. Bangor opened a 4-1 lead in the third when Glen LaBar unloaded a three-run homer.

But Slate Belt came back for four runs in the fourth on a pair of hits and three Bangor errors. It made it 6-4 in the fifth when Gary Miller scored on Pensyl's passed ball. Bangor set the stage for the sixth inning when Brad Reddinger homered.

Quinn Martino's second double of the game broke a deadlock in the fourth inning Saturday and Slate Belt went on for the victory.

Pococo North opened a 2-0 lead in the second inning when Mark Smith walked and Randy Transue singled to right, both men advancing when Craig LaBarre bobbled the ball. Kirk Lindsey then singled up the middle to bring in both runners.

But the winner tied the game the next inning when Martino led off with a double, went to third on a passed ball and scored on LaBarre's double.

After LaBarre went to third when Lindsey bobbled the ball, he scored on winning pitcher Gary Miller's infield out on a play in which first baseman Tracy Acuff tried to get the runner at the plate, but was late.

Miller allowed just four hits in the game, striking out nine and walking one. After the second inning he was never in serious trouble.

Slate Belt put the game well out of reach in the sixth inning when it sent 11 men to the plate and scored seven runs. They came on just four hits, including Ozzie Rutt's double, and four errors.

Grand slam homer Philadelphia killer

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Tito Fuentes' first big-league grand slam capped a six-run third inning and Garry Maddox drove in three more runs with a fourth-inning homer Sunday as the San Francisco Giants defeated the Philadelphia Phillies, 10-7.

Jim Barr, despite giving up 13 hits, went the distance to register his third victory in five decisions. Woody Fryman, driven out during San Francisco's third-inning rally, suffered the loss and is now 3-10.

Barr was behind as a result of an unearned run when the Giants trailed him to those six runs in the third. Singles by Barr and Bobby Bonds plus a hit batsman filled the bases with none out.

Barr scored the first run when Don Money booted a smash to third by Chris Speier. A balk by Fryman sent across a second run and then Ed Goodson walked to fill the bases and set the stage for Fuentes' bases-loaded shot.

The Phils kept pecking away, picking up a run in the seventh on Greg Luzinski's 10th homer and two more in the eighth on Money's third single, a triple by Oscar Gamble and a single by John Bateman.

Pair hurls five-hitter; Pittsburgh sweeps Astros

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—Bruce Kison and Dave Giusti combined to pitch a five-hitter which gave the Pittsburgh Pirates a 3-2 victory and a sweep of their Sunday doubleheader with the Houston Astros before 49,341, the largest crowd of the year.

The Pirates won the first game, 3-2, when Houston reliever Fred Gladding hit Bob Robertson on the right wrist with the bases loaded in the 10th inning, forcing in the winning run. Walks to Willie Stargell and Rennie Stennett, sandwiched around Manny Sanguillen's single, had filled the bases.

Robertson's double off the left field wall scored Stennett with the tying run in the eighth and enabled reliever Giusti—who hadn't yielded a run in his previous 19 appearances—to grab his fourth win against four losses.

Giusti earned his 13th save of the season after taking over in the ninth inning despite yielding a two-run single to Lee May, giving the Pirates their sixth doubleheader sweep of the season. They split their only other twinbill.

The Pirates took a 1-0 lead in the first inning off losing pitcher Don Wilson when Vic Davillio was safe on an error, took third on Gene Clines' single and scored on Al Oliver's groundout.

Oliver's single, a double by Stargell and Stennett's single gave the Pirates two more runs in the fourth.

Giusti pitched to Kison in the third when Berry walked with one out, went to third on Leo Cardenas' single and scored on Pinson's sacrifice fly to deep centerfield.

Pinson's fly to deep centerfield. The Angels scored their run in the fifth when Sandy Alomar singled with none out, was sacrificed to second by Allen and scored on Ken Berry's single.

In the first game, May held the Brewers to two singles, both by Tommie Reynolds, to make his record 3-7.

The Angels scored the game's only run in the third when Berry walked with one out, went to third on Leo Cardenas' single and scored on Pinson's sacrifice fly to deep centerfield.

California gains split with Bosox

MILWAUKEE (UPI)—George Scott's two-run single in the eighth inning gave the Milwaukee Brewers a 2-1 victory over California and a split with the Angels Sunday.

The Angels won the first game, 1-0, when Rudy May held the Brewers to two hits and Vada Pinson drove in the only run with a sacrifice fly.

The Angels held a 1-0 lead when the Brewers scored their winning runs in the eighth inning. Pinch-hitter Ron Theobald led off with a single and Rich Auerbach and Brock Davis bunted successfully to load the bases with none out. Scott cracked a single to centerfield to give the Brewers and starter Bill Parsons the win.

Parsons is now 7-7 and broke a personal five-game losing streak. Rich Clark took the loss in relief of starter Lloyd Allen.

The Angels scored their run in the fifth when Sandy Alomar singled with none out, was sacrificed to second by Allen and scored on Ken Berry's single.

Dodgers top Expos by 4-2

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The Los Angeles Dodgers scored four runs in the first inning, two on a triple by Bill Buckner, and held on for a 4-2 victory over the Montreal Expos Sunday.

Don Sutton allowed seven hits, walked none and struck out six in gaining his 11th win against five defeats. He gave up three singles after yielding both Montreal runs, one unearned, in the third inning.

It was Sutton's eighth complete game of the season. Montreal starter Bill Stoneman, now 8-7, allowed just four hits over the next five innings after the opening frame before Tom Walker took over to finish.

Two pitching errors lead San Diego past Mets, 7-3

SAN DIEGO (UPI)—Throwing errors by pitchers Jerry Koosman and Danny Frisella in the seventh inning opened the way for a four-run surge by the San Diego Padres and a 7-3 victory over the New York Mets Sunday.

Koosman, now 8-5, was charged with the loss while Bill Greif, the third Padres pitcher, got the win, his fifth in 16 decisions. The loss dropped the Mets 4 1-2 games behind first-place Pittsburgh.

With the score tied 3-3, Dave Roberts opened the San Diego seventh with a walk. Jerry Morales sacrificed but when Koosman threw the ball into rightfield Roberts raced all the way home to break the tie.

John Milner recovered the ball, scored on Nate Colbert's sacrifice fly.

Greif laid down a bunt midway to the mound which Frisella fielded but threw into leftfield trying to catch Gaston sliding into third. By the time John Milner recovered the ball, both Gaston and Jeter had scored.

Oakland sweeps Yankees by 5-2

NEW YORK (UPI)—Continuing to use the power with devastating effect, the Oakland Athletics completed a four-game sweep of the New York Yankees Sunday when home runs by Joe Rudi and Mike Epstein paced a 5-2 triumph.

Mel Stottlemyre, who went into the game with a 22-inning scoreless streak, was jolted by the second hitter he faced when Rudi hit his ninth homer off the rightfield foul pole.

Orioles top Sox by 6-1

BALTIMORE (UPI)—Boog Powell's third home run in the last five games sparked an 11-hit assault on Wilbur Wood Sunday as the Baltimore Orioles trimmed the Chicago White Sox, 6-1, in an abbreviated first game of a scheduled doubleheader.

The second game was called because of rain which interrupted the first contest with one out and the Orioles' batting in the seventh inning.

Powell homered in the sixth inning, his ninth, after Bobby Grich singled. The Orioles gave winner Jim Palmer, 13-4, a 2-0 lead with single runs in the second and fourth innings.

Baltimore scored twice in the seventh before the rains came. Wood, 13-10, gave up 11 hits in 6 1-3 innings.

Baltimore scored in the second inning when Don Baylor cracked the first of his two doubles and scored on a Brooks Robinson single.

Powell singled in the fourth inning, took third base on a Baylor's double and scored on another Robinson single.

Maryland governor ends 'riot' by 200 prisoners

JESSUP, Md. (UPI)—Saying he was "a peace-loving man," Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel Sunday ended a 10-hour disturbance by 200 prisoners at the Maryland House of Correction by agreeing to meet with inmate representatives.

"We were not going to have a repeat here of what happened up in New York," Mandel said referring to the uprising in Attica State Prison last year in which 43 persons were killed by state police retaking the prison.

As more than 300 riot-gear police stood by, Mandel told Col. Thomas Smith, state police superintendent.

"I am a peace-loving man. Let's talk to them instead."

During the disorder, two guards and four inmates were injured and rampaging prisoners caused damage estimated in the hundreds of thousands of dollars. They set several fires and smashed windows and furniture.

The inmates returned to their cells after an angry confrontation between Mandel and the prisoners, separated by two chainlink fences only five yards apart in the rear of the prison.

Mandel told them he would meet with a dozen inmates to discuss grievances on the condition that the rest of the men returned to their cells. A demand for amnesty was denied.

Although the prisoners finally agreed, they did not trust him. "They (the police) have rifles and if we go back they'll kill all of us," one inmate shouted through the prison yard fence.

The rebellious prisoners, mostly young blacks, gathered around the fence, dressed in casual civilian garb and wearing rags over their faces to mask identification.

Rep. Parren Mitchell, D-Md., a black, guaranteed the inmates they would not be hurt.

"Have I ever let you brothers down?" he said.

The inmates said they were unarmed, but several weapons

Reputed mafia chief killed on quiet Brooklyn street

NEW YORK (UPI)—Reputed Mafia chieftain Thomas Eboli, a one-time light manager who rose to become a kingpin in the East Coast rackets, was killed gangland-style early Sunday on a quiet residential street in Brooklyn.

The 61-year-old Eboli, who also was known as Tommy Ryan, was the latest to die in a rash of gangland murders that began with the April 7 shooting death of Joseph "Crazy Joe" Gallo in a Little Italy restaurant.

Since Gallo was killed, the prophecy of his sister that "the streets are going to run red with blood, Joe," has produced at least eight more underworld assassinations.

Eboli, heir to the crime empire of the late Vito Genovese, who died in prison in 1969, was found sprawled face up in a pool of blood in front of a private residence. He had been shot at least five times in the head moments earlier.

Detectives said they were planning to bring in organized crime figures for questioning.

But a source in the Brooklyn District Attorney's office described it as an "oddball killing," and said no Mafia "family" immediately could be singled out for suspicion.

In the Gallo shooting, "soldiers" of the Joseph Colombo family were suspected by authorities. Police believed that Gallo may have engineered the near-fatal shooting of Colombo at an Italian-American unity day rally in June, 1971 and his own murder was motivated by revenge.

Eboli's body was found by two radio car policemen on routine patrol who were flagged down by an unidentified passerby after hearing shots and seeing Eboli's body on the pavement.

Eboli, known to law officers as a dapper dresser, was wearing a blue jump suit, a blue-and-white checked shirt, a three-stone diamond ring and an expensive Lucien-Picard watch when his body was found. A gold crucifix was around his neck.

Eboli allegedly had interests in gambling, narcotics and

Church elects leader

ISTANBUL (UPI)—Leaders of the Orthodox Christian church chose Turkish Metropolitan Dimitrios Papadopoulos Sunday as Patriarch of Constantinople and spiritual leader of the denomination's 150 million members worldwide.

Church sources said the new Patriarch, who will be known as Dimitrios I, will be crowned Tuesday, provided the Turkish government gives formal assent.

Dimitrios succeeds Athenagoras I, who died July 7 at the age of 86.

"May God make me worthy of your decisions," said the 58-year-old prelate.

"May God help him," a black-clad Greek woman said as Dimitrios led his fellow bishops from the Patriarchal church of St. George.

Among his fellows, Dimitrios is known as "the quiet Metropolitan" and "the man who never makes mistakes."

Orthodox church and government sources said Dimitrios is acceptable to both progressive and conservative wings of the church and to the Turkish government.

By insisting that the new Patriarch be both a citizen and resident of Turkey—unlike Athenagoras, who was a naturalized American—the government had limited the choice.

The government also ruled out several Turkish bishops.

The new Patriarch has the task of filling the shoes of a well-loved man who worked for Christian unity.

Although the post of Patriarch of Constantinople is small and virtually powerless in a predominantly Moslem country, the man who occupies it becomes the first among equals of Orthodox patriarchs around the world.

Dimitrios was educated at the French-Greek church in Istanbul and became a priest in 1937.

Later he was sent for a time to Athens as an assistant pastor and for higher education. In 1949 and 1950 he taught Greek history at the University of Thessalon. He became a bishop in 1961 and was appointed Metropolitan late last year for the Aegean island of Imros and Bozcaada (Ketenodon).

Proposal may test McGovern's strength

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The between-convention session of Congress cranks up today with the Senate debating an "end-the-war" proposal which may test Democratic presidential nominee George S. McGovern's new political clout.

The Senate also was expected to act swiftly on an emergency relief measure to aid victims of floods created by tropical storm Agnes.

In the House, a major development in the coming week was the possible appearance of Frank Sinatra before a committee investigating organized crime.

After a two-week recess to allow Democrats to nominate their presidential election candidates, Congressional leaders promised pressure to clean up a mountain of work before the Aug. 18 recess when Republicans re-nominate President Nixon. At least one member of Congress will not be on hand tomorrow. Sen. George S. McGovern, the Democratic presidential candidate will be resting in the Black Hills of his native South Dakota.

Assistant Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd warned before the now-completed two-week recess started that his colleagues should be ready to come back and work long hours six days a week.

Byrd scheduled resumption of debate today of the foreign aid authorization bill, which Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., wants to amend so that funds would be cut off for U.S. combat forces in Indochina after Aug. 31.

Byrd also planned a "tandem" work arrangement for the Senate, setting a certain number of hours per day for the foreign aid bill, after which other major measures would be taken up.

Under this arrangement, a bill was waiting for consideration today to increase the $1.60 per hour minimum wage to $2.20 during the next two years. The House has passed a bill that would boost it to $2 over two years.

House floor action will center around routine bills early in the week while waiting for the Rules Committee to clear a $2.58 billion authorization bill for military defense construction for a floor vote by Thursday.

The House Select Committee on Crime announced for at least the second time in recent months that Sinatra would appear to testify at its inquiry

Testimony it has received from a score of witnesses on fixing horse races

Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott said Sunday he will introduce the administration's $1.8 billion Agnes Recovery Act today when the Senate reconvenes.

"This is the initial commitment by the administration, to help rebuild communities, keep businesses going and assist residences in this recovery effort," Scott said in a statement.

The legislation is designed to liberalize cash grants and loans to property owners, residents, communities and businesses in areas devastated by last month's floods.

Scott said he expects the legislation to move swiftly through the Congress.

Stolen truck charge lodged

BLAIRSTOWN, N.J. — Walter Cooke, 46, of Cooke Road, Blairstown, has been charged with receiving a stolen truck-tractor valued at $24,000.

Cooke posted $1,000 bail for a hearing before Blairstown Township Magistrate Joseph Steinhart. State police at Washington said the tractor had been stolen from Fowler Motors, Sparta, N.J., a year ago.

Computers speed

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Air Transport Association says about 265 million airline reservations a year are made by phone and the average transaction is completed in two-and-a-half minutes.

Worried about answering a blind box number ad? (because you don't know who the advertiser is?)

If you are worried about answering one of these blind ads... since it may be your own firm... you may not want to place your letter of application in an envelope addressed to the box number and seal it. Then put the envelope in another envelope addressed to the Classified Dept., The Pocono Record, and enclose a note that you do NOT want to receive your reply. If one of the companies (or individuals) you listed placed the ad, they will simply discard your reply. Sorry, but we cannot return your letter without violating the confidence of our advertisers.

A & B PERSONNEL EMPLOYMENT AGENCY

Personalized Career Consultants. 27 N. 6th St., Stroudsburg, Pa. Ph. 426-0276

TEACHERS: Applications are being accepted for the Pleasant Valley School District. Substitute teachers for 1972-73 school term. Graduate teachers interested in substitute work should call 992-4728 for information.

BIRCHWOOD has immediate opening for: JANITOR. CHAMBERMAID. FRONT DESK CLERKS (DAY AND NIGHT SHIFTS). Call 429-9272 or apply in person.

SALESMAN

Immediate opening for licensed real estate salesmen. You can earn $50,000 per year easily. If you have a neat appearance, well-spoken, honest, and confident, you will be a young aggressive person on the scene in the heart of Pocono activities. We do NOT sell high pressure and use gimmicks. We respect our customers and believe in "backing" a letter system. Our closing rate is very high on a friendly, sell-back. If you are respected as an executive salesman, NOT a number in a lineup, call Mr. Ford for an appointment. 712-636304.

If you are worried about answering one of these blind ads... since it may be your own firm... you may not want to place your letter of application in an envelope addressed to the box number and seal it. Then put the envelope in another envelope addressed to the Classified Dept., The Pocono Record, and enclose a note that you do NOT want to receive your reply. If one of the companies (or individuals) you listed placed the ad, they will simply discard your reply. Sorry, but we cannot return your letter without violating the confidence of our advertisers.

blind box number ad?
(because you don't know who the advertiser is?)

If you are worried about answering one of these blind ads, since it may be your own firm - simply do this:
Place your letter of application in an envelope addressed to the box number and seal it. Then put the envelope in another envelope addressed to the Classified Dept., The Pocono Record, and enclose the names you do NOT want to receive your reply. If one of the companies (or individuals) you listed placed the ad, we will simply discard your reply.

Sorry, but we cannot return your letter without violating the confidence of our advertisers.
